Top Ten tuition busters

BY GINGER SNAP
A.K.A. GINGER BREAD,
GINGER ALE, GINGER ROOT,
ETC.

A state-imposed tuition and fees increase has been announced, and many students are frantically searching for ways to make ends meet.

With this in mind, The Bacon has devised a list of possible options for supplementing students' incomes and improving financial status.

You'll also find the approximate cash worth of each suggestion listed below. With luck and skill, you can garner enough funds to cruise through the next school year with cash to spare.

1) Kidnap Arnie Subvert, WPC President, and hold him for ransom. Net gain—about $30.

2) Go to Auxiliary Services 9 or 10 times a day for the rest of the semester, and tell them you lost $2 in the cigarette machine. Don't worry, they'll believe you. Net Gain—Textbook money.

3) Hold up the pool hall attendant on a Tuesday night. Remember, everyone will be there, so wear your "Chilly" mask. Net Gain—Enough for a case of beer and a large cheese pie (study aids).

4) Sell that annoying roommate and/or R.A. of yours into bondage. Net Gain—Big bucks; tuition and fees for at least two classes.

5) Find a loser looking for a parking space, and ask how much your space, situated in front of the library in lot 4, is worth to him or her. Better yet, rent out your medical permit. Net Gain—Between $4 and $50, depending upon how desperate the loser is.

6) Print up fake bills on the SGA's new Postermaker. Net Gain—Possibilities are endless if you're detail-oriented.

7) Rent a few porn flicks and charge your horny friends admission. Net Gain—Depends on how many lonely friends you have.

8) Rent out your dorm or apartment at hourly rates. Net Gain—Again, depends on how many undersexed students you can find.

9) Hold an SGA auction, put John Placenta, John Andrehack and Bill Hey-Ho on the block, and sell 'em to the highest female bidders. Net Gain—Let's put it this way; you could transfer to Harvard.

10) Sell this classic Bacon issue.

Several overly liberal ex-administrators of WPC were incarcerated in the Passaic County Jail when they made a daring escape in this getaway school bus, pictured above. The fugitives were forced to park haphazardly on the gravel due to lack of legal parking spaces on campus. For more on this story, see page three.

Greezy to WPC: "Walk in the mud"

BY WRITE RIGHT
COPY EDITOR FROM HELL

Campus sidewalks have been declared "off limits" to all pedestrians because "they just get in the way of campus vehicles," said Eddie Greezy, director of facilities.

The restrictions go into effect Sept. 1, just in time for the fall semester and the rainy season. Off the record, Greezy said "Let them walk in the mud."

However, he said it won't be all bad for those who walk the campus. Pedestrians can use the walkways on odd-numbered days of the month after 5 p.m., and anytime on weekends.

"Hey, it's not really that bad. These kids are just a bunch of spoiled brats who just look for any excuse to complain and act like it's the 60s again."

The plan has been met with angry protests and something amazing happened. Some students actually got involved in something. A protest was held last Thursday and attracted ten students, quite a huge number for a WPC event.

The crowd dissipated as the pub opened, though. One student said "Hey, don't you think I've made enough of a sacrifice standing here (at the protest) all day? You don't expect me to give up my pub night, do you?"

For a good time—Vote!

BY ELIZA DOOLITTLE
CRUISE DIRECTOR

Students who vote in next year's SGA elections will get to ride the "Terror Coaster" which will be installed in front of the Student Center.

The "Terror Coaster" will be on loan from Great Adventure in Jackson.

"The Gyro went over really well," said John Andrehack, executive vice president of the SGA. "We want to reward those students who vote with something really big, and 'The Terror Coaster' idea was unanimously approved by the SGA.

The cost is worth it, Andrehack said. "For some reason, Great Adventure lent us the coaster for practically nothing."

"It's safe, though," Andrehack said. "The SGA would never expose students to danger."

"It's just a fun way to let the students know they did the right thing by voting," Andrehack said.

The "Terror Coaster" will be installed this July, in time for the summer programs scheduled for area adolescents.

"The kids who are here over the summer will get to ride the coaster," Andrehack said. "Of course, they will be charged a little fee, under the activities heading."

The "Terror Coaster" will excite riders next fall.

The "Terror Coaster" wowed theme park goers for three years before Great Adventure lent it to WPC.

"It was our most popular ride," said Great Adventure spokesman Lyon Cheet. "That was before we had a little accident, but Mr. Smith is fine now. He's out of intensive care and should regain use of his limbs soon.

We paid for a prosthetic leg and he seems to be functioning just fine," Cheet said.

"The coaster is 100 percent safe," Andrehack said, "and it's going to be a better attraction than the Gyro."

Elections for next year's SGA officers won't be for a while, but Andrehack said he would consider letting students ride the coaster just to entice them back.

Escaped administrators still at large

BY NORMAN BATES
CHEF

The men pictured are escaped criminals from Passaic County Jail and are wanted for questioning in connection with altering school policy to a liberal extent.

Wince Piano, Bomb Bacollo, Spark Evangelist and Phoney Baloney Mahoney were administrators at WPC but were arrested on charges of being too progressive for the administration. Mahoney left WPC years ago, but still affected decision-making at WPC by sending mailgrams under an assumed name.

The four men were accused and convicted of liberalizing school policy back to the 60s standards and were suspended from their positions pending a criminal hearing. While held at Passaic County Jail, the group tied their bandanas together and formed a tightly coiled rope, making their escape at around 3 a.m.

A female Paterson resident said she witnessed the four men walking down Market Street at approximately 4:30 a.m. but did not question their outdated attire or rowdy laughing. "I thought they were just a bunch of guys reliving the old days," she said. "They didn't look like criminals to me at all."

The four men are facing maximum penalties if they are found. The penalties include Wayne Hall dinners for five years and community service in Wightman Pool for two hundred hours.

Thus far, the men have eluded Paterson and Wayne Police, but witnesses have seen them breakfasting at Patty's Pancakes in Haledon and dining at Casey O'Toole's on Hamburg Turnpike, Wayne.

Anyone having information leading to the capture of these men will win free lunch in the Pioneer Restaurant and free tickets to the Distinguished Lecturer Series.

In an effort to catch these known felons, WPC has approved the broadcast of their crime and incarceration on "America's Most Wanted." The program will air Sunday night.

"These men are dangerous," said Dennis Cantellyou, college spokesperson. "They have altered the minds of innocent young people and made progressive thinking attractive to impressionable minds."

Topless Pub

BY NORM PETERSON

A proposal to make Billy Pat's Pub a topless bar during certain hours was sent to the administration for approval last week. The idea is the result of a need to bolster patronage of campus residents.

Marc Pulthis, Pub manager, said "I've got big plans for this place. We want to retain those students that normally go home on weekends by keeping the pub open all weekend. Specials will be free drinks for topless women and men, generously endowed, wearing biker shorts."

"We realize a topless bar may be objectionable to some people, but I can assure you that I will personally be on hand to ensure the propriety of such an endeavor. I will inspect everyone attempting to get free drinks because there are some people who might try to take advantage of the situation by not being completely topless or well endowed," said President Subvert.

Pulthis also said changes will be made at the bar so underage students could enter the pub topless, but would be limited to a no-alcohol section.

Academic Action

The questions/answers in this column are supplied by the staff of the WPC Advisement Center, located in Wayne Hall Room 138.

1. How do I calculate the amount of credits I still need to graduate?

Since majors vary widely in the amount of credits required, it can be confusing to calculate how many more credits you need to take. If you entered WPC before Fall '86, you need 120 credits (minimum) to graduate. If you entered during Fall '86 or after, you need 128 credits (minimum) to graduate.

In certain majors the total of GE requirements, upper-level electives, and major courses does not equal 128 credits. The remaining credits needed to graduate, then, are free electives. They can be used for extra courses in your major, for courses outside your major that interest you, (provided that all pre-requisites are met), or for courses to fulfill a minor or a concentration.

To calculate these free electives you must add up the credit requirements for GE, for upper level electives, and for your major courses. Subtract the total from 120 or 128, depending on the year you entered WPC. The remaining number is the amount of free electives that you must take.

2. Is there a list of courses that fulfill the Upper Level Elective requirement?

No. Simply take courses which are beyond the 100 level and not in your major area. By major area, we mean the courses listed on the side of the curriculum control sheet containing your major requirements.

3. Where may I apply the 3 credits I need to take to satisfy the NON-WESTERN requirement?

The non-western requirement is known as an area requirement. This means that the course taken may be applied to any one of the following four areas of the curriculum:

a) the major. If the particular non-western course taken also happens to be a requirement if your major, the three credits will apply towards your major as well as satisfying the non-western requirements.

b) a GE elective. If the course you take from the non-western list also happens to appear on the GE electives list, the three credits will apply towards the GE electives and will satisfy the non-western requirement at the same time.

Quayle was and still is JFK

BY RAD HAMBURGER
 STAFF WRITER

At a press conference on February 29, White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater announced that Vice President Dan Quayle is really the 35th President of the United States, John F. Kennedy.

This announcement will be a great asset in the 1994 Presidential elections, since the fact that Quayle wasn't J.F.K. was a major Democratic campaign slogan.

Surprisingly enough, Quayle pointed out that his life as himself is remarkably similar to his life as J.F.K. For example, J.F.K. served his country as a p.t. boat commander in the Pacific Theatre during WWII and was decorated in the process. Quayle also served his country during the Vietnam War at a desk job in the National Guard.

Kennedy was a Harvard graduate with honors. Quayle honors the fact that he graduated college. Kennedy was the author of a Pulitzer Prize winning book. Quayle has read this book.

As far as service in the United States Congress, Quayle boasts to have served double that of Kennedy. This he explains is because he adds the years he serviced as Kennedy to the number of years he serviced as Quayle.

"I am very optimistic about the future," Quayle said. "Being the 35th President of the United States should quell fear that I am under-qualified."

Pink returns...one last time

BY PINK

Well, well, well...I've had so much on my mind, I was so glad when I died...Yes, I've been silent and with good reason. I've matured into a responsible, law-abiding citizen, and one who is kind and considerate.

No longer do I wish to produce poisonous parenthetical proclamations of musical mishmash and spew forth bitter and harsh tones of discontent with the present multi-billion dollar hit cranking wheel-of-fortunate chief executive directors who dictate company policies and force feed hungry, bed-wetting, pimply-faced pre-adolescent poor excuse for a hand job jerks with Phil Collins (Genesis) Boston, Sting, REO Speedwagon, Journey, Debbie Gibson, Tiffany...(put it this way, any Madonna-wanna be, including Madonna)...The list can go on but, like I said, I've turned over a new leaf.

I really miss all the attention though. I mean, last year, tuition was going to be raised and what were students writing letters to the editor about? ME! I'm glad to see the students have their priorities straight — "tuition can go up but don't make fun of my music!"

Who am I? I'm Aquarius, 24, single, and if you like mainstream trash, your worst nightmare.

See ya, I'm off to England to scout down the Divine Water Bearer and tell him I understand the words to "Don't Bang the Drum."

Tarot cards solution to advisement

BY KISSAMY GLORIOUS
 ESTAFON
 ENDANGERED SPECIES

Academic advisers will be using Tarot cards in aiding students with scheduling. Academics VP Spamovick got the idea during last week's Springfest. "I saw all of the students flocking to get their palms and Tarot cards read, and thought it would be a great idea," Spamovick said.

There are still some rough edges to the system. Departmental secretaries may use the Tarot cards to find out if a student will ever see their adviser to retrieve their course request card.

"If a student knows they'll never meet up with their adviser, then they can make alternate plans for the following semester, like get a job flipping burgers until the course card-toting adviser can be located," Spamovick said.

If the tarots do join an adviser and advisee, they can lead the adviser toward course choices.

"We needed to make advisement more interesting for professors," Spamovick said. "Those silly master schedules and academic handbooks were just too damn dry and the faculty wasn't reading them."

When push comes to shove, usually at on-line registration for those who don't cosmically connect with their advisers in time for mail-in registration, wrong course choices are the responsibility of the student.

"Basically, the student must know every and all departmental and college requirements and rules. We just need advisers to hold those course request cards. They are awfully pesky to mass file," Spamovick said.

Academic advisers and departmental secretaries can retrieve their tarot cards from the turban-headed mechanical fortune telling machines in the lobby of Raubinger Hall.

Additional costs for this new system will be passed on to students under a new academic advisement fee.

Lorenzo to buy WPC

BY JAY GATSBY
 STUFF RIDER

Airline mogul Frank Lorenzo said he will buy WPC before the end of the semester, if, "the price is right."

At a press conference in Raubinger Hall yesterday, Lorenzo said he has always wanted to acquire a college of his own.

"I've never been to a college quite like this," Lorenzo said, "and I want it." Lorenzo and his entourage, comprised mostly of burly men in their fifties, toured WPC after the press conference. During the tour, Lorenzo pointed out changes he planned to make after the purchase.

"This will be the control tower," he said, pointing to lot 5. "Over there I'll put in a small terminal. For private use, of course."

Lorenzo told reporters he will use some of the older 727's from Eastern and Continental airlines because, "they don't make them like they used to."

Among other changes Lorenzo has planned is the installation of a private screening room in Hobart Manor.

"I have one at home, and one in the jet. It's hard to live without a screening room when you've had one for so long," he said. "I have to spoil myself, because no one else will."

Lorenzo said WPC will be the ideal location for him to "get some peace" from angry union workers who have not forgotten the Eastern airline fiasco.

Close enough to New York City, WPC is still

"Human lives mean very little next to a few hundred million in profit."

suburban; Lorenzo said, and its existing facilities can "all be easily renovated."

Lorenzo was affable and relaxed as he regaled reporters with humorous anecdotes of the Eastern crisis. "Hey, I'm a businessman," he said, "I'm in it for the money. Human lives mean very little next to a few hundred million in profit, if you know what I mean," Lorenzo said.

Lorenzo refused to comment on the purchase price negotiations, but promised that the purchase of WPC would be "quick, efficient and relatively painless."

Betty Crocker serves award for Wayne Hall grub

BY CHEF BOYARDEE
 FOODS CONTRIBUTOR

Wayne Hall, that illustrious place of scrumptious delectables, recently won the Betty Crocker Award for its outstanding fare.

Employees of Wad Company, who supplies WPC with all its equipment, workers and food, are ecstatic about the award.

Head server Zelda said, "It's about time the public realized that we're more than just a dining hall."

"We try to make everyone happy," Zelda said. "We can't of course, but we try."

Students are equally excited about the award. Belly Button, a Wayne Hall regular, said he can't wait until Sunday brunch. "It's better than my mom's cooking," Button said about Wayne Hall.

Zelda said the award is well-deserved, especially since she and the other workers "slave over open originals and specialties of the house.

The Betty Crocker Award is given to outstanding institutional cooks and food service employees. It is coveted by flames and sweat profusely in order to accommodate hungry residents."

A representative of Wayne Hall will accept the award on behalf of all the workers.

The award will be presented on May 32, at a special dinner. Entrees include Johnny Marzetti and Texas Tommy, Wayne Hall such notorious institutions as Marlboro State Hospital, and Rahway State Prison.

Last year, Rahway won the award for its specialty, "Cooked Crooks." This is the first year Wayne Hall was graced with such an honor.

"Once they taste this food, they'll be banging down our door," Zelda said.

Bellowout still unable to speak

BY SCARLETT O'TAROT
 ASTROLOGICAL MEDIUM

Michael Bellowout, assistant registrar, infamous for the quote, "Use Priority Registration!" has not recovered from the laryngitis he was stricken with during late registration last Fall.

"The doctor originally said it was a simple case of stretched vocal cords," Bellowout wrote. "They now believe those cords may have snapped completely."

Bellowout was refereeing students during late fall registration when the tragedy occurred. Students Knoe Eardrums and Kant H. Ear were eye witnesses to the event.

"He just lost his voice," Eardrums said. "It was as though he was going to holler [use priority registration!]" but he stopped at the "Use part."

"I don't think [Bellowout] himself could really believe what was happening," said Ear. "Suddenly, he just stopped hollering and looked down."

Bellowout was immediately rushed to the hospital and diagnosed as having acute laryngitis by the physician on call. His throat was immediately treated with vocal restoration solution to speed his return to the Registrar's Office.

Unfortunately, Bellowout's vocal cords have not healed, and chaos has broken out at the Registrar's Office.

"Several students have regained their hearing," worried Mark Televangelist, Head Registrar. "Some have even stopped using the late registration process!"

Bellowout has contacted a Laryngical Specialist and is scheduled to undergo vocal cord surgery next week.

Time, speaker, location changed

BY KISSAMY GLORIOUS
 SMUT CONTRIBUTOR

The location for graduation has been changed, but the new location cannot be revealed, according to Dennis Armadillo, campus p.r. director. "We always change the location, and it's too soon to disclose the spot. We never say this early," Armadillo said.

The name of the graduation speaker is still a really, really big secret as well. Both topics will be highlighted in next week's "Unsolved Mysteries" television show.

The day of graduation will remain the same, but the start time has been moved to 6:15 a.m. in order to discourage rowdiness and improper decorum. Seven graduates are expected to attend.

Grab bag ploy discovered

BY GRIFF
STAPH WRITER

Students: Did you know if you lose a valuable article, jealry or otherwise, and it's been over six months, you have no right to ask Security if it is found? That's right. Campus Security does not know anything "lost over a six month period."

Even after you are forced to describe the article in painstaking detail, including the exact date and area where it was lost, you will receive a blank stare from Security Lost & Found. And maybe, just maybe, if you beg, they will check their records - only if you describe the article in painstaking detail again. That's right, students. You have no right pestering Lost & Found - especially if you lost the article more than six months ago.

Our investigative reporter from The Bacon has been conducting covert action incognito to unravel the mystery of articles "lost for over a six month period."

"As it turns out," said

The Bacon's Porcina Povich, "the articles are kept locked up in this huge vault. Then when students are away, during interval breaks like Christmas and Easter, the valuables are put into a grab bag and passed out to faculty and staff as gifts."

The Bacon would like to warn any students who lose an article to report to Lost & Found immediately - before your valuable winds up in the grab bag.

Police want heavy artillery

BY GRIFF
STAPH WRITER

Today, a requisition for heavy artillery and armored tanks was submitted to Governor Kean's office by a representative of Campus Police.

The Bacon was also informed that Campus Police will be required to enroll in such courses as "Guerilla Warfare" and a "Critical Analysis of all Dirty Harry Movies". Credits will be offered, and the state will reimburse participating officers.

To further insure the safety and well-being of WPC students, officers will be trained to march in goose-step formation on campus, an unidentified officer said.

"We finally made the big league," said Sergeant Quickdraw McGraw. "Students will really think twice before they park in faculty/staff now."

Meet George Jetson...

BY JOYOUS NOISE
GOSPEL SINGER

The Administration of WPC has decided that, since many students have complained about the distances they must travel on foot between classes, the installation of a skyway conveyer-belt, which will connect all the buildings and parking lots, is "a novel idea," according to President Artie Subvert.

Subvert said students will ride the belts at a speed of about 45 miles per hour, which will assure students who tend to wake up late for class "a speedy arrival at their chosen destinations."

"It'll be just like on the Jetsons—my favorite cartoon!" Subvert exclaimed. However, he conceded that several students, females in particular, were worried about the shape of their hair after riding the belt.

In a recent survey of Apartments residents, though, this was listed as a small price to pay for a service that requires such little effort. In fact, Suzy Cue, a sister of Iva Lotta Haira, said, "It's great! Now I can just hop out of the shower, Stiff Stuff my hair, and ride the belt. By the time I get to class, my hair is twice its actual size!"

Passing the wind: Far from roses

BY POISON P. PEN
TART EDITOR

The WPC Drama Club concluded their backstage series with the comedy, Passing the Wind around two weeks ago. It was held in the lobby of Shea Center for Performing Arts, due to lack of sales from the college community.

This comedy deals with a man's struggle to be able to express his natural functions in the public. Marty Farts is this man who deals with this dilemma. Joe Squeak Clean is the lawyer who comes to this small, desolate town to spread God's word with his campaign, "Cleanliness is next to Godliness." Little does he know that the notorious Slum Muckel has arrived to take a stand against clean in what proves to be a down and dirty battle. Clean (Brut Malone) and Muckel (Kirk Dirt) play off each other quite well, which is to be understood due to their past experiences.

Farts, played by Tony Moany shows no emotion and seems as if he could care less if he won or lost this case.

Other so-called significant characters are Gene Green (Pam O'Winer) Fart's love; Rev. Green ("Guy Smiley") and M. P. Scornbeck (Tom Scuzmondo) the reporter sent in to cover the story.

O'Winer is far from believable. The viewers winched each time opened her mouth. It was tempting to give her a pacifier if it would shut her up. Rev. Green was overly dramatic in his "Give a hoot, don't pollute" sermons. So much so it looked as if he were ready to cardiac arrest. As for Scornbeck, his "Get to know me" attitude let me wondering if it was safe out on the streets.

The rest of the cast members were so insignificant. I almost forgot they were there. By the way, who was that bum walking around town?

The sets were so pathetic it looks as if they were picked out of some remote junkyard in Whosville, U.S.A.

About the director, was there one? I highly doubt it. The show overall was very sloppy and far from a comedy, more like two hours of intense torture.

Oh, if it's any consolation, the remainder of the shows have been cancelled due to any overwhelming amount of threats from the audience. Nice try, guys, but maybe it should be left backstage.

WPC says no to guns; yes to criminals

BY G. RANDEE OLPARTEE
CONFORMIST
EXTRAORDINAIRE

It has been learned that the Administration will say no to guns for Campus Police because, "We've worked hard to make everyone believe we're a bunch of bleeding-heart liberals, and a move like this could blow our cover," said Artie Subvert, WPC president.

To bolster such an image, Subvert has announced the admission of several social misfits as part-time students at WPC.

Charles Manson will be attending beginning this fall, and plans to take advantage of the new criminal justice concentration offered by the Sociology department, Subvert said.

Joel Steinberg is also enrolled for the fall semester, majoring in psychology, and, pending his parole, Sirhan Sirhan is expected to take a night course this summer, possibly in political science, Subvert said.

An added pleasantry will come late in the fall, according to Subvert, when the Student Exchange program will be expanded to include terrorists from all over the world. He alluded to the possibility of Ayatollah Ruollah Khomeini and Moammar Ghaddafi being added to the student roster before long.

"We're forging ahead with the age-old ideal that all men are created equal," Subvert concluded.

The WPC Campus Police department has been instructed to "leave the poor guys alone" unless one actually attacks a fellow student with malicious intent. In that case, Subvert said, the officers have permission to whack the perpetrator in the kneecaps with their nightsticks.

When asked whether or not this new policy is going a bit too far to the left, several students echoed a resounding "NO!"

Gory Lunarmadness, president of the Herstory Club, said, "Criminals are the same as the rest of us. Just give them some peace, love and understanding, and they'll eventually come around."

Bickering over the "B" word, officers split from Leg meeting

BY POLLY SIGH
ROVING RIDICULER

At the final SGA Legislature meeting, all heck broke loose and no one could agree on anything, according to several bickering legislators who took a moment to scream at the Bacon reporters.

It all started when Jeff Whinespleen, SGA president-elect, introduced his plan for the future, titled "The Ten Basic Steps To A Basically Happy Student Body." He began by stating, "Basically, I'd like to begin by stating my basic objectives and then I'll answer any basic questions..."

His voice trailed off as all the legislators in the room plugged their ears and began humming, so as to tune Whinespleen out.

John Placenta, current SGA president, sensed dissension in the air and grabbed Whinespleen by the throat. "I told you the 'B' word would kill you politically, and you refused to listen to me," Placenta exploded. Whinespleen explained that he uses the word because he hasn't decided what his stance on any of the issues is. "It's basically a middle-of-the-road word," he said in regards to the 'B' word, and that was the last straw for Placenta.

He dragged Whinespleen out of the meeting and brought him straight to Malhi Hypnomediumopolis, the SGA secretary who's been seen moonlighting as a turbaned seer. Placenta begged her to hypnotize Whinespleen, and "get that WORD out of his sorry little head!"

In the meantime, Steve Magnolias, who holds some obscure position no one's ever heard of, attempted to get on with the meeting. However, John "Smiley" Andrehack, executive vice president, insisted they wait on the missing senior officers. Magnolias told Andrehack he would "wipe that plastic smile" off his face, but Andrehack remained undaunted.

As they squabbled, Murray Sendmetogetit, executive vice president-elect, hollered "Beer Run," and Bill Hey-Ho, vice president, along with all the fraternity brothers in the room, took off to "find the party."

When Whinespleen and Placenta finally returned, neither was happy to see Magnolias, delirious with delight at the sight of Andrehack frowning in a corner. Whinespleen was upset because "no one stayed to hear my Ten Essential Steps To A Generally Happy Student Body," and Placenta pouted since his brothers had a party and didn't invite him.

What is The Bacon?

Yes, there is something different in this issue. Something we've all awaited with tremulous hearts and minds. It's The Bacon, and it's a parody on all that's wrong, right and ridiculous at WPC.

We decided not to warn anyone that The Bacon was coming, so we hope it had the desired effect. The real sections have been labelled accordingly to avoid confusion.

We do this every year. There's something different in the air in room 810 of the Student Center. Something "they" have put here to keep us crazed and deranged.

The Bacon is the product of the twisted minds of The Bacon staff. Hey, we're allowed. We sit up here, night after endless night, day after endless day, thinking up ideas, badgering administrators at 3 a.m. and generally making a pest of ourselves just to provide you with all the information on what's happening, what will happen and what has happened.

A lot happened this year that's worth thinking about. The hiring freeze really messed things up. Helpline closed because there weren't enough people to staff it. A Read-in of censored books taught us that literature should not always be banned just because it is offensive. Several distinguished speakers graced WPC with their eloquence. The issue of a dry campus became a real possibility, and commencement is still upsetting many people.

Aside from thinking about how these issues affect us as students, we should think about how we, as the next generation of leaders can effectively deal with them. Helpline should never have closed. Staffing problems? There's got to be a few hundred students doing a whole lot of nothing with their time who could have easily volunteered a few hours a week to work at Helpline. Nobody did, and it's no surprise, but it's a damn shame this service had to close for such a reason.

We've all heard enough about apathy, so for once, let's DO something about it.

Hesitantly by next year, we can do something about it. We're in college, we're supposed to think about solutions to the world's problems, we're supposed to think about how to change things and actually MAKE the changes.

Well, that's certainly enough to think about. We hope you enjoyed reading The Bacon as much as we enjoyed writing it.

Have a great summer!

Extreme solutions to parking problem

Editor, The Bacon:

As a concerned WPC commuter, I would like to propose some solutions to the campus parking problem that may help my fellow students.

1. Buy a sleeping bag, park car in spot of your choosing, spend night in car.

2. Invest in a Freshman Student Car Radar Detector. When you drive by a parking spot that is inhabited by a freshman's car, back up one hundred feet and deploy a small, limited space missile to blow it up. Park your car in the now vacant spot.

3. Invest in portable hydraulic system. When you find a car in a prime parking spot, levitate that car and move it out of the way. You are now free to park in that spot.

4. Try the Towed-Removal System. Choose a parking spot. Run to nearby phone and call towing service. Have them remove car that is already parked there. Once the car is gone, that spot is free for you to park in.

5. Purchase a Parking Attendant Uniform. Catch person just getting out of their car after you have failed to find a spot. Insist to that person that their car is illegally parked, and if they do not move it, you will issue them a ticket and have the car towed immediately.

7. Buy a small can of heavy white spray paint. Turn faculty spaces into student spaces in an instant! If a faculty member's car is already there, ensure that it is not one of your professors, and blow it up with a limited space missile. You are now free to park there.

These are just a few of the inventive solutions available to commuter students who fail to find a decent parking spot morning after morning. With a little creativity, others can easily be discovered.

Topless pub night gets o.k. from student

Editor, The Bacon:

I think this new work-study proposal is far-out and fantastic! I'm a fourth-year freshman studying to be a model here at WPC, and the possibility of a topless night at Billy Pat's pub will help me and the other men and women like me to showcase our talents and make extra money to pay off our firebirds with T-roofs.

Immoral? Socially unacceptable and degrading? Pooh! Whatever happened to the 48th amendment to the Declaration of Independence? Separation of church and state! We should fight for our rights to freedom of expression, just like the pilgrims who came here in the Nina, the Pinta and the Santa Maria did.

Maybe I don't know everything, but I do know that there's nothing wrong with the human body, and, as one Playmate of the Year once said, "If they're against nudity, they're probably just jealous."

Ease up, Mom

Editor, The Bacon:

I'm very angry with you. You never come home and when you do you're irritable, grouchy and more slovenly than you used to be. I don't know what's come over you, dear. You show no interest in making terrariums anymore and your diorama needs serious attention.

I wish you would stop this nonsense and come home to your mother, who loves you and misses your sweet, innocent face. If you come home I'll bake you chocolate chip cookies with sardines in them, if they're still your favorite.

I beg you, please come home and make me happy. If you don't I'll hold my breath, I swear.

Are we Born to be mild? Cancel classes during Springfest

Editor, The Bacon:

I am outraged by a lack of consideration for the students during last week's Springfest.

The student organizations worked hard to prepare activities for all to enjoy, but neither the administration nor the faculty made an attempt to cancel classes during the week.

Imagine the guilt I felt when I was forced to blow off all my classes because of the fun going on in front of the Student Center.

Also, it was terribly inconvenient to walk around the Student Center to use the bathroom. Why did I walk around, you ask? Because there were armed sentinels at the front doors, trying to check the bookbag and 7-11 cup that I was carrying. They didn't believe me when I told them it was a collection of literary masterpieces and a cool 7-11 fountain drink, respectively.

What is the world coming to? My world is now filled with shame. I only hope my professors will understand that I was fulfilling my obligations as a student outside of the classroom. If not, I may have to take them out so we can discuss it over several 7-11 fountain drinks.

SGA President challenged to pudding wrestling match

Editor, The Bacon:

As the founding member of the Lee Atwater Fan Club, I am outraged with the leftist policies enforced by former SGA President, Arthur Gondolas. I cannot believe that such indoctrination is practiced on this bland, apolitical campus! I have to wonder what Gondolas believes he is doing undermining the entire college community.

There is only one way to settle this matter. I would like to challenge Mr. Gondolas to a wrestling match outside the Student Center. The match will take place at 10:30 a.m. on May 18. No one really wants to go to commencement, anyway. The Fan Club has already arranged to have a large pool of Jello Brand Chocolate Pudding set up on the lawn for the match.

Come out, Arthur, and we'll show you that good old fashioned masochism is better than fey liberalism. Come on, Gondolas, WE DARE YOU.

Editor, The Bacon:

Last week was Springfest. A celebration of the 20th anniversary of Woodstock. The theme? Return to be Wild. Steppenwolf wasn't even at Woodstock! The only smell of smoke was the grease sizzling off the burger and dog grill, and no one asked me for rolling papers.

MTV forgot the original idea of Woodstock; a celebration of peace, love and music. They just took a choke-hold of the concept and hyped it into yet another commercial for themselves. Rande of the Redwoods....you sold out on us man.

How about that canned music Tuesday? New Kids on the Block was being piped out of somebody's boombox in front of the Student Center. The mood? Hostile - Yosemite Sam meets the IFSC. There was some kind of ugly dunking contest, if that's your idea of fun. And plenty of frat and sorority tee shirts and jackets - where the hell were the Woodstock tees? Forget it, neo-bohemians - the hype is too much. These poseurs wear their hippy ragtags from Bloomies.

The tables that were set up? Scary. More hype and embarrassment of the '80s....and yap, yap, yapping, no music from the '60s.

At 1:00 Wednesday, there was a carrot-topped man doing a version of Simon Sez, only the loud and obnoxious need apply. Somebody won a trophy even though the game wasn't "officially" finished. Then the MTV crew reared their ugly heads and Carrotman said, "People, we got 45 minutes to tape - the idea is enthusiasm if you want to be on TV." So much for spontaneity.

After five minutes of watching people following Carrotman, he said, "Ladies and gentlemen, we're gonna do the same thing over until we get it right." What a sham! During the taping Carrotman told a female participant, "You're pretty but you're dumb—you're pretty dumb." Heh, heh. Where did they get this guy?

Kevin Seal and Rande of the Redwoods did what they are best at doing: nothing. Wherever MTV rears its ugly head, there is a big pile of frat and sororities. The crowd was taped doing a lame version of "See you in September," a couple of painful takes and that was it. They carried a crumpled MTV banner reading "School's Out" and waved it above their roaring heads. That was about 4:50 p.m. - I guess you could call that the crescendo. It supposedly will air May 21st - but if you've seen any other MTV manic taping, you've seen them all. So if you're a masochist, by all means indulge.

How about that canned music Wednesday? The Allman Brothers' "Ramblin' Man," and The Eagles, "Take it Easy." Wrong — '70s bands. What happened to Jimi or Janis?

The Bench Press. Far out. I'm sure there were plenty of hippies doing arm curls at Woodstock. The only arm lifting there was probably to pass a joint. The funniest sight? A pumped-up dude in baggy tan chinos and raybans with a stink weed behind his ear. I guess the weed was his summer of love emblem. Well, he tried to be heavy.

The saving grace? Yagur's Farm. They cooked and they were SINCERE. They did excellent covers of songs by Deep Purple, Led Zeppelin, Hendrix and Santana. The crowd who sat "digging the scene" boomed and chanted "bullshit" when Yagur's Farm was forced to take a break to accommodate MTV's taping. If MTV wanted to tape "happening" students, they should've had their cameras rolling during Yagur's set, not for a forced scene of yahooping.

We also had "Hippy Shake Aerobics" in the left corner of West Plaza, neatly. I'm sure there was a lot of neat, organized dancing at Woodstock. They danced, but I don't think they knew it was good for them - or cared.

If at any time you forgot where you were, you could look up and see our omnipresent campus police hovering down on you - probably wishing they were in a Clint Eastwood movie instead.

Due to the advent of campus guns, maybe we should have celebrated the 20th anniversary of the film Easy Rider. After all, it does feature the tune, "Born to be Wild."

So for those of you who were stuck in class, you only missed out on two groovy things: the beautiful weather and Yagur's Farm. The rest? A bad trip, man.

Student is really Marshmallow

BY MARI See STABLT
SCIENCE FICT/ON WRITER

The true identity of Steve Magnolias was revealed at the final meeting of the SGA Legislature last Thursday. Magnolias, his position unknown and uncared for, is the Sta-Puf Marshmallow Man, whose picture has dominated candy stores and supermarkets for years.

The revelation came as John DeSPF-2, current SGA president, concluded his last meeting.

"I want to thank all of you for a great year," DeSPF-2 said. "I also want to congratulate Steve Magnolias. It has been very difficult for the Sta-Puf Marshmallow Man to obtain..." DeSPF-2 stopped short, but it was too late. Everyone was already looking at Magnolias, wide-eyed and surprised.

Go climb a mountain

BY DEF AMATION
LIBEL CONTRIBUTOR

A new course in mountain climbing will be offered beginning next fall "because there's a definite need for one," said Hardy Harhar from the Movement Science and Leisure Studies department.

"We felt that the college needed such a program because, hey, it's kinda tough getting around this campus. It was either blast the mountains away or teach the kids how to climb over them. So, of course, the college, in its never-ending quest to save the students' money, chose the cheaper option."

Harhar said the class will be taught on the hill upon which the Apartments sit and residents will be able to take the class at a reduced rate.

Realizing what had happened, Magnolias/Sta-Puf stood, mortified, and initially began tirade, accusing the legislators of being "incompetent and ignorant buffons." But soon he realized that the entire board was clering with excitement at the respect of having such an esteemed public figure in their midsts. "Princeton had Brook Shields; now we've got a mov star too!" exclaimed one gidy observer.

The hardest part about keeping Steve's identity a secret," DeSPF-2 said, "as when he left for a semester to star in Ghostbusters. Not only did we

Two computers were caught interfacing at the Askewed Library earlier last week. The library worker who caught them reported that an infectious computerized virus was now running rampant throughout the campus computer system.

"We don't understand how this happened. Those computers know all about contraception and protection," said Askewed librarian Bookin Reference. All students who have used the computers within the last week may have contracted the virus, or at least have it on their disks, Reference said.

"So far, the virus has not infected the Coach House," said Area Byte, director of the Computer Science department. She advises anyone who suspects they have had contact with the infected computers to bring their disks to a special clinic set up at Wipe It Out Hall for byte-by-byte treatment.

Towers will become world's largest K-Mart

BY CECIL B. DEMILLE
PUBLIC RELATIONS

Residence Life plans to convert North and South Towers into the world's largest K-Mart.

Construction on the eight story twin-winged structure is planned to start next Fall and will take up to one year to complete.

"The college was losing a lot of money by housing students in the Towers," said Len Farber, director of Residence Life, "so the Campus Beautification Committee, along with the Paterson Commission on Fair Trade decided to convert the Towers into a K-Mart."

The project plan requires that the whole structure be gutted and remodeled, leaving the exterior intact, Farber said.

Commissioned to do the work is Bob Vila of "This Old House."

"Me and Norm are going to start busting down walls late in August," Vila said. "We hope to get a camera crew in some time soon to do some preliminary footage and then the rest is Norm working, and me talking about the project," Vila said.

In addition to the initial project, the school hopes to profit from Vila's new video, "How to Turn Your Dormitory into a High Profit Chain Store."

The video will be available on Time-Life Video Library.

Society column: Helpful hints for a special occasion

BY CHARMAINE
CHAMPAGNE
CLAUDIA COHEN'S CATTIER COUSIN

Hey ladies! Just a few days left 'til the social event of the season...the Senior Dinner Dance. What say we get all those pre-celebratory aggressions out before Thursday, to ensure the well-being of our dates, if nothing else.

First of all, anyone shopping in the malls knows the experience bears no resemblance whatsoever to those department store commercials—chronically happy, well-dressed beauties skimming from store to store, demurely giggling all the way. On what planet? Let's face it; there's something about the entrance of a mall that causes some serious physiological metamorphosis in women. We become beasts.

You doubt this? Well, fix your gaze on the only size nine, black-sequined, lace-trimmed cocktail dress on the rack, and see if a perfect size five doesn't saunter up and swipe it away! She'll wrestle you for it, too—heck, she can have it taken in a few feet.

So let's say you won the battle with the prom queen who never got over it. Now it's...accessory time! Never mind the fact that you have a pair of perfect black three-inch 9Wests; those glimmering Givencys with the $89 pricetag are begging to be bought.

"What if you're in an accident, wouldn't you want to know everything matches."

Jewels are next, ladies. Big time haubles. Every extremity—fingers, wrists, neck, earlobes—must drip with them. After all, this is a formal occasion. Don't think about the fact that you'll never wear the stuff again; just let the overzealous, sight-impaired saleslady with dollar-signs for eyeballs sell you a $120 set of gaudy rhinestones which, according to her, "flatter" and "complement" you.

Don't think you're in for a bit of a rest when it comes to the undergarments. You may think No Nonsense will do, but Calvin Klein's putting out a new shimmer hose, at eight bucks a leg, that the saleslady will convince you you'll need two pair of, or she'll die trying. And if you're thinking about wearing any old brassiere and panties, the saleslady will go into the "what if you're in an accident-wouldn't you want to know everything matches" spiel. It's the truth. It happens.

Now, for the final feat, try and make it out of the mall without seeing everything you just bought in another store window, priced a fortune and a half less than you paid for it. Oh, one more tidbit of advice: Don't read the sign in the men's store window that touts tuxedos—all sizes, shapes and colors, with everything, even the shoes, included—for $69. It'll be more than you can take!

And if you make it out of there with your sanity intact, I'll see you on Thursday.

This just in. A special Task Force direct from Governor Kean's office will be investigating the recent increase in student tuition.

To assist the Task Force, special administrative positions have been created at WPC: The Task Force Chief Executive Officer, The Task Force Acting Chief Executive Officer, The Task Force President, The Task Force Vice President, The Task Force Treasurer, The Task Force Co-treasurer, The Task Force Secretary, The Task Force Administrative Assistant, The Task Force Assistant to the

200 bucks per credit

BY LACK ADAMICAL STUFF WRITER

A tuition increase is inevitable and will come "real soon," said Dennis Cantleyou, dictator of college relations. When asked exactly when the increase will take effect, Cantleyou said he couldn't be more specific "because it's none of the students' damned business anyway."

Sources close to the situation say tuition could go from the current $48 per credit to as much as $200 per credit, plus fees. "We want to improve the image of the college, so we figured if we charged the same amount as, say, NYU, we would finally get some much-deserved respect," said Vice President of Finance Em Bezzle. "Besides, do you know how much it costs to keep this place lookin' so great? We used most of the students' money last year in renovating Hobart Manor. Now that it looks so nice, we put some administrators' offices in there. The ironic thing is that most students won't ever see it."

Tragedy strikes "Lewis"

BY KISSAMY GLORIOUS ESTAFON

Sophomore "Lewis" still remains awake and alert today after a tragic fraternity prank in October. Lewis was required to drink seven consecutive cups of Snack Bar coffee on October 17.

An unidentified brother said, "It was okay for Halloween since he came to our party as a zombie, but the guy hasn't shut his eyes for 6 1/2 months."

Doctors are confident that Lewis will recover. They cited the fact that his caffeine injection has allotted him the required energy to make the many darts to the bathroom with agility and speed.

Lewis has been named the "Honorary Sentinel" of his fraternity.

"We like to emphasize a brother's individual talent," said Studboy Greekman, a fellow brother.

Donations for Lewis can be sent to him, care of The Bacon, room 310 of the Student Center. Visa, Mastercard, American Express and Discover credit cards accepted.

Dominic Pesi was stunned, naturally.

"Yes, it's hard to believe," said the coach. "Wright is probably the best player coming out of high school this year and now he's coming here. I guess if the shoe fits, he should wear it."

"Luth Wright will be an impact player for WPC basketball."

Pioneers no longer

BY C. ME SPURTZ WRITER

In a stunning revelation, WPC's Director of Athletics Arthur Eason announced Friday that the school's sports team name, the Pioneers, will change to something else starting next semester.

The reason for the change, according to Eason, was that, in his opinion, the title "Pioneer" never gained a true identity.

"Most people think that a Pioneer is something that occurs in a bakery after a food fight," said Eason. "It's time for a change."

The choice of the new team name will lie with the campus community. A ballot of the top selections at the right of the page, suggested by Rec Center officials and campus athletes, is to be filled out and returned to room B-48, North Tower by Wednesday.

WPC Pioneer baseball Dilly-Daly's in the ninth

BY L.M. LYING
STAFF WRITER

In 15 seasons of head coaching at WPC, baseball skipper Jeff Albies has seen his share of wild innings.

But he'll be the first to admit yesterday's ninth inning at Rider was all new to him. "I've never seen anything like this," he said.

The reason Albies was stunned: After being no-hit by Pioneers senior Jim Daly for eight and two-thirds innings, Rider erupted for 13 runs with two outs in the bottom of the ninth inning, including four on Tom Gavin's game-winning grand slam on an attempted pitch-out, to stun WPC with an amazing 13-12 victory.

"It's truly unbelievable," Albies said. "We had a 12-0 lead, Jimmy Daly is one out away from pitching a no-hitter and they score 13 runs to beat us. I'll tell you one thing: If I retire from coaching tomorrow, I'll have seen everything in baseball."

Daly yielded six hits in the bottom of the ninth and was victimized by seven WPC errors. "I can't blame Jim,"

Jim Daly

Albies said "The errors hurt him. I had confidence in him all the way I wasn't going to pull him out, not even at 12-9 and the bases loaded."

Representing the game-winning in, Gavin worked Daly to a 2-2 count, before stepping out of the batter's box. WPC pitcher Garrett Teel then met Daly on the mound for a brief meeting. When Teel returned to catch, he surprisingly called for a pitch-out, which would have forced in a run but bring Senior Ortiz, Rider's light-hitting catcher, up to bat.

"I didn't care about walking in a run," Daly said. "I felt like I would strike out Ortiz and we'd win the game."

But on the pitch-out attempt, a lightly-swirling wind brought the pitch back towards the plate and Gavin connected on a towering 400-foot home run over the left field fence.

"It was classic strategy," Albies said. "I don't think we'll use it again, though."

WPC had taken a seemingly insurmountable 12-0 lead with four runs in each of the first, fourth and eighth innings. Dan Leon cracked two three-run homers and John DiGirolomo and Craig Contrini added solo round-trippers.

Everything changed in the bottom of the ninth when Billy Joe Steinbrenner and Aaron Cashen rapped back-to-back singles with two outs, then four straight Broncs reached on errors as the floodgates opened up.

"We blew this one," Albies said. "But there's always tomorrow. We won't blow a 12-0 lead next time."

Luther will be going Wright here

BY F.F. FLETCH
STAFF WRITER

In a move surprising the entire high school basketball world late Saturday night, Luther Wright of Elizabeth High, who is expected to be one of the top senior prep players next winter, verbally committed to attend WPC in the fall of 1990.

Wright, a 7'2" junior who plays center and led the Minutemen to a Group IV state championship and into the finals of the inaugural Tournament of Champions high school basketball tournament last winter, was a concensus first team All-Star player and is considering a pre-season All-America for 1989-90 by many scouting services.

He said "the opportunity to stay close to home" was the reason he selected WPC over such schools as Syracuse, Iowa, Louisville and Rutgers. Over 100 Division I schools had shown interest in recruiting him.

"I want my relatives

Basketball

and my friends to come watch me play in college," said the 260-pounder, who averaged 18 points, 12 rebounds and eight blocked shots during the 1988-89 regular season.

"I know I could have gone to a bigger school in the area and still have them see me play, but I knew from the start William Paterson and its outstanding program was right for me.

"Basketball is important to me, but my classes will come first. Getting a William Paterson education is my top priority. Oh, playing in a packed Wightman Gym will be awesome, but attending those classes will be number one in my mind.

"Yeah, but can you imagine playing before all those fans. Wow, I can't wait. I hope I'll be able to handle all the media coverage, though."

WPC men's swimmers forgive and forget

The WPC men's swimming team held a ceremonial apology session last Wednesday to "bury the hatchet," after a season full of fighting and bickering amongst the swimmers.

Head coach Ed Gurka decided to hold the make-up meeting this semester, hoping any remaining ill-feelings between the swimmers would discontinue before the swim season begins next October. According to Gurka, everything went as planned.

"It was all very emotional," said the coach. "All the guys were sorry about what had happened this year. When the ceremony ended, I couldn't find a dry eye in the whole place. I got a little misty myself."

The event, which took place at the pool in the Wightman gymnasium, was held due to a series of season-long quarrels involving the team's top swimmers. Minor internal conflicts soon became more battles as the pressure of trying to win their conference came into play.

It all began in early November with an incident between swimmer Lawson Coates and senior Roger Hamm. Hamm, known on the team for his many female companions, was telling Coates about a romantic interlude between he and a former boyfriend of Lawson's in the locker room. The ill-tempered Coates then proceeded to stuff Roger into his locker and then threw a lit match at him, causing him to suffer second-degree burns all over his body and earning the nickname "Baked" (Hamm).

The ugliness continued when the usually ultra-conservative Paul Peters played a cruel joke on happy-go-lucky like Rosenthal. Peters informed Rosenthal that Coach Gurka was cutting him from the swim team. Rosenthal, believing Peters wrong, then exploded at Gurka. The result- 20 extra butterfly stroke laps in the pool. Reportedly, Rosenthal was all smiles when he heard of his punishment because of his love for strenuous shoulder work, but he remained angry at Peters.

These occurrences and other altercations led to tensions for the team. Despite their final 9-3 record and their fine fifth-place finish in the Metropolitan Championships, the men's swim team did not enjoy themselves. Even team leaders Chris Bloch and Jamie Clements, the two people who went to the most practices and cared the most about the team, could not get the team out of its disliking for each other. After the season ended in February, Coach Gurka knew something had to be done if things were to be different next year.

Said the coach, "I knew the apology ceremony would work. It was beautiful to watch."

Men's swim team says "I Love You!"

Indeed it was. As DeBussy's "Clouds" echoed throughout the pool, the swimmers lined up behind the starting blocks at the front of the pool. All dressed up in their racing suits, each member of the team gave a two-minute sermon on the high-diving board, begging for the acceptance of their apology. When all the speeches were completed, a ceremonial one-lap swim involving all the swimmers proceeded.

The ceremony ended with the swimmers pairing off into twos and giving each other a 15 second embrace.
