CAMPUS RUMORS

WPC Student Center to be renamed by corporate sponsor

Claiming that rising costs have left them with "no choice," William Paterson College officials announced this week that the Student Center would be renamed that Taco Bell Center. The change came after the Corporation made an undisclosed donation to the college.

In a press release, the company cited their "close ties to the students stomachs and minds," as the impetus for the donation.

The donation, the first of it's kind at WPC is to be used to help start a culinary program. "We believe in fine food, for fine people," said company president.

Additionally, no other types of foods will be sold on campus except for Taco Bell and it's subsidiaries.

Similar arrangements have been made at other colleges and universities.

As to whether this is the beginning of a trend at WPC, Arnold Speert, college president would only say, "Well, how much do you got?"

WPC Annex to house Rowan College courses and studio

College officials have revealed that design of the new academic building on campus had a purpose other than aesthetic. The new building will house Rowan Colleges School of Engineering Shipbuilding program.

Rowan's School of Engineering, was created as the result of a 100 million donation, which also brought about a change in the schools name from Glassboro College. That facilities that will eventually house the school and still under construction and will not be completed in time for the school year.

WPC President Arnold Speert said "I am pleased that we will be able to assist out sister institution during their time of need."

Members of the community were also pleased about the decision.

"I actually had no idea what the building one," said one WPC Dean. "I thought it was possibly an airplane hanger, guess I was wrong."

Actually Speert revealed the initial plans for the building included a brewery hence the "tall" design.

WPC to focus on morse code

Officials at the William Paterson College School of Arts and Communication announced this week that the department of communication had "found a niche that WPC could specialize in" and would be focusing all efforts from now on teaching morse code.

"We can not teach them everything about communication, this is one thing that will make them and us, unique," said one professor.

Provost arrested

Compiled from Bacon Staff Reports

The William Paterson College campus community is reeling from the arrest last Saturday night of Chernoh M. Sesay, WPC provost and vice-president for Academic Affairs.

Sesay, who came to WPC in February, was arrested when WPC Campus Police responded to a call from the Heritage Hall Resident Hall Resident Director of an individual activating the fire alarms.

Area fire departments had refused to respond after supposedly being summoned for three false alarms in a two hour period.

Upon arrival, according to police officials, Sesay was found sitting atop an empty beer keg beneath a "pulled" fire alarm box. Allegedly, Sesay was part of a group of students playing the children's game "Red Light, Green Light." Further investigation also revealed that Sesay was the organizer of a party that had occurred earlier in the evening.

"It was a complete mess," said one officer, "there were students passed out everywhere, puddles of beer and vomit. It was a gosh darn war scene."

According to reports, as he was led away in handcuffs, Sesay kept repeating "I figured out how to keep retention up! The students, they'll stay!"

Witnesses reported that at approximately 8 p.m. that evening, Sesay, who has been living in the residence hall while looking for a house for his family, met an Anheiser Busch delivery truck in front of the building.

"It was amazing," said one resident, "they must have rolled off at least 60 kegs."

Not everyone was so amused.

"I begged and pleaded," said long time friend, Jimmy the janitor. "But he just said, I know what I am doing"

WPC president to resign

Compiled from Bacon Staff Reports

In a week that has been full of surprises, the sudden announcement of the resignation of long-time William Paterson College President Arnold Speert did not shock many. His reason shocked everyone.

"I have decided after consulting with my wife and children to leave WPC and pursue my dream of becoming a Rockette," Speert said at a press conference on Tuesday.

His announcement shocked members of his staff who claimed that "they had no idea."

"I have been working for him for years," said assistant Lee Vadalla, "I didn't even know he could dance."

According to friends close to the family, Speert had initially tried to pursue a dancing career during college but only got as far as a chorus in part on the WPC campus unknowingly cast Speert as a line dancer in a disco scene. Those close to him acknowledge that it was probably this that stirred up his dancing desire.

"I have for a long time wanted to dance," Speert told a reporter, "There were times at Board of Trustees meetings when I just wanted to kick off my shoes jump up on the table and dance like there is no tomorrow."

"I always thought his infatuation with Footloose was just a thing, I didn't know it was this serious," said another family friend.

According to sources, Speert is looking to eventually star in his own production of La Cages a Faux. Broadway sources acknowledge that he has already brought on dancer for an off-broadway production of Oklahoma. Discouraged he pursued a degree in Chemistry which eventually brought him to WPC as a professor and latter vice-president and finally president.

"I thought he was over this dance thing," said the family friend who wished to remain nameless. "It was that movie, they had to use him."

SGA to build dormitory

In a statement distributed to the entire campus community, William Paterson College Student Government Association President Alex Malino announced that the SGA would break ground this summer for a new high rise residence hall.

"We are tired of the colleges inability to properly maintain the dormitories," Malino wrote. "We don't think it is too much to ask for roofs that don't leak, floors that don't flood and elevators that really work."

Malino was referring to the two apartment style dormitories Heritage and Pioneer Halls and the Towers dormitory.

"The motto of the SGA is 'Here for you' and students have asked us to look into better housing," Malino explained in the memo. "We have spoken to our financial advisor and figured that the best thing we could do would be to build a building and maintain it ourselves."

Allegedly, the college had been negotiating with the SGA for the SGA to pick up the tab on a number of repairs that the college does not have the money to cover.

"It's not that we don't want to fix the problems, I even think we know how," said WPC

Resident Director, "But there is only so much money and we would rather use for new furniture and other eye pleasing projects."

According to the memo, the new SGA dormitory, to be named Freedom Hall, will have no visitation policy -- spouses and children welcomed. Additionally each of the one bedroom apartment style suites will feature full kitchens with dishwasher, microwave ovens and garbage disposals. The living rooms will have a computer hooked up to the college network as well as a full entertainment center including surround sound, laser disc and beta (just in case). Laundry service will also be available.

"We tried to think of everything," said Malino. "We want students to feel as special here as they do at home."

The new 20 story building will house 240 students and will be built on top of the site of the SGA volleyball court.

"It was rarely used for volleyball, and a logical site logistically speak," Malino said.

Valet parking will be another feature of the SGA hopes to offer.

•It was recently revealed that William Paterson College Student Government Association President, Alex Malino (pictured above left) had never finished Elementary School. Malino made this confession when it was revealed that he could not read. He claims that it was his father who paid off his teachers, "I am willing though to go back and finish all the grades," he said. WPC Dean of Students Henry Krell (pictured above right) found the revelation "just another in a long line of disappointments."

board long time friend and theatre producer Richard Nirenberg to help in the financing. Nirenberg who is director of college relations at WPC will be staying at the college.

"I have not comment at this time," he said. "And you can quote me on that."

A replacement has not been named.

"I'm in shock," said another WPC administrator, "Out of everyone, I never would have thought that Arnie Speert could get down and boogie."

Bacon snubbed at awards

Four the fourth year running, The Bacon was again snubbed at this years student awards banquet.

In a letter given to the Bacon staff, the organizers of the evening and award selection committee members cited a number of factors that again contributed to the papers being denied an award.

Those reasons included: The 26 issues of The Bacon do not cover the total number of weeks of school. The letter also explained that "While the committee does recognize that Bacon members work backbreaking hours producing the paper, firemen work more."

One Bacon staff member who was present for the evening said, "Hey, we knew we wouldn't win, we just came for the free eats and the booze."

One member of the selection committee offered this piece of wisdom, "This is WPC, what do students here know about dedication, devotion and volunteering?"

As to whether or not this will effect future relations, a Bacon editor said, "Nah, we never did trust them anyway."

WPC Campus Police lay down the law

Citing the current bruhaha over the parking ticket collection process, past difficulties with community relations and the continuing refusal by the William Paterson College Board of Trustees to let them carry weapons, WPC Campus Police have announced that they will no longer issue any types of tickets, nor make any arrests.

"We've had all we're going to take and we're not going to take anymore," said WPC Police Chief Pete Ryerson. "My men and woman work darn hard, and if this is how they are going to be treated well, fooye."

"We're disappointed by their actions and are investigating our legal stance," said WPC Vice-President of Administration and Finance Peter Spiridon. "But community members should be alarmed, I am leading a class through the policy academy and we will shortly be taking over their duties."

In addition to himself, the class is said to include, Tim Fanning, assistant vice-president for administration and finance, Rajendra Singh, assistant vice-president for human resources, Marc Schaeffer, executive assistant to the president, and Peter Ljutic, bursar.

Spiridon is also pleased that this class has more women than the current campus police force.

In actuality, there are three women on the roster for the WPC class, they are: Nancy Norville, dean of enrollment management, Diane Ackerman, acting director of financial aid and Pamela Fueshko, director of telecommunications and administrative services.

The latest dispute involving campus police, regards attempts at collecting nearly 1 million dollars in outstanding parking tickets.

Community members have been outraged at the language used in a collection letter and the number of missbillings that have occurred.

"Actually, I am from New York City," said one faculty member and unpaid ticket-holder, "and in New York this type of strong-arm tactics goes on all the time."

"I'm not going to let you beat up on me or my people anymore," Ryerson told a Bacon reporter, "so shoo, I'm going to hunt turkeys. At least these I can shoot back at," he added.

As for concerns that lawlessness will rule over the campus during the time before the new "recruits" come on board, one campus police officer said, "Nah, nothing will change, students here don't realize the opportunities they have in front of them. Hah, we didn't even have locks on College Hall for three weeks and nothing happened."

The Student Government Association, which in the past has been supportive of the police in the past has been quite regarding this latest incident.

"I don't think it is our place to get involved," said one SGA member.

As to what the officers will do, since according to college officials, they will not be fired nor removed from payroll, "They'll be a visible presence on campus," said a police union spokesman.

"We'll continue to work with the community, letting them know what we are and what policing is about and hopefully getting them to see our side."

As to whether or not they feel they are letting the campus community down he responded, "For a long time now we've been told to put up, put up and put up, it got to the point that our work was really beginning to suffer. We had to do something and a standard strike was not really the answer."

As for students, one female student said "I did not realize that behind the uniforms and badges, there were real people. Actually, they are kind of cute and cuddly, especially that

A member of the WPC Campus Police shares ice cream with a WPC student as part of the new community relation program.

"You may be surprised, but I am pleased with how campus police have responded," said WPC president Arnold Speert, "rather than striking, they are showing our students, that sometimes you have to do things differently."

No discussions between the two parties are scheduled at this time.

Editor in Chief takes over paper

•Greenbaum to produce entire paper solely next year

Bacon Editor-In-Chief Yoni D. Greenbaum surprised his staff this week by summarily firing all of them effective June 1.

In a brief memo distributed by Greenbaum at a staff meeting and carbon copied to much of the college community, Greenbaum wrote, "I have always kept the best interest of the paper in mind." But, he said he is just sick and tired of working with everyone, "especially Jeremy," and therefore "decided that it would be best if he just did the paper himself next year."

His stunned staff only received the brief answer "I'll manage" when they asked how Greenbaum was planning to sell advertising, handle the business end, do the layout and design, reporting, photographs and all the other duties that producing the paper includes.

Greenbaum allegedly told one friend, "Hey I already am Editor In Chief, News Editor, Business

"He is such a stellar student, I would hate to see his academics suffer because of the paper."

--Krell

Manager and Design Director, the rest should be cake!"

The majority of The Bacon staff has supposedly already announced their intentions of working for the electronic newspaper being set-up by the communication department.

"Hey if he dunna want us, we'll leave," said one staffer. "I'm sure they will like the fact that I can spell good."

According to sources, the "Last straw" for Greenbaum was the production of the year-end satire issue.

This issue, The Porker for the most part was allegedly written and produced by Greenbaum.

"I am quite concerned," said WPC Dean of Students Henry Krell. "He is such a stellar student, I would hate to see his academics suffer because of the paper."

When asked for a interview, Greenbaum responded, "Give me twenty minutes and I'll write it and lay it out for you myself."

Early signals may have gone ignored

Police reports also revealed that latter in the evening Sesay led a crowd of students gathered in front of building in chants of "W-P-C-W-P-C," while riding shirtless atop an Anheiser Busch Clydesdale.

"Man you should have been there, the guy was out of control," said one party attendee.

"He's finally brought WPC back to where it should be, the number one party school in the COUNTRY," chimed in another student.

In the early 80's WPC was ranked as one of the top "Party Schools" in the country. In recent years, stricter rules and orthodox administrators have caused this ranking to disappear.

WPC President Arnold Speert said in a released statement that "While we are perplexed by Dr. Sesay's actions, I have full confidence that he has the best intentions of the college in mind, and therefore should be given the leeway to do what he deems necessary."

WPC's enrollment has slipped during the past couple of years. Members of the college's administration acknowledge that Sesay was hired, in part for his expertise at increasing enrollment and retention rates.

While police officials confirm that the investigation is still open, one person close to the investigation has revealed that Sesay had given signals that this was coming.

"He supposedly wanted to change WPC from 'William Paterson College' to 'We Party Constantly,' go figure."

Hangin' with the Alterna-youths at Springfest

By Noose

CHIEF SLAMCIDER

Amid complaints from several female students, it was learned that the two principal members of Alterna-youths, the Stockholm, N.J. based group were the culprits.

Vocalist/lead harasser Slim Chicken Pen and his Pepsi endorsing sidekick, Shmoe Jigelo, police said, were walking up to the students with their acoustic guitars in hand and saying, "All I know is rock n' roll. Do you want me to play some rock n' roll for you? I know rock n' roll."

When apprehended by the police, Chicken Pen said, "All I know is rock n' roll, man. I asked the girls if they wanted me to play some rock n' roll and I got rejected as usual. Ask Shmoe."

The normally reticent Shmoe told the officers, "It's true. Slim was being an idiot as usual and was bothering these girls, putting on a stupid voice saying 'I know rock n' roll. Do you want me to play some rock n' roll for you?' and then they ran away. I didn't think anything of it because that is the typical reaction women have towards Slim. I mean it sucks man, every time I go out with him, which is always, I can never meet anyone 'cuz this idiot is like a female repellent."

Slim disagreed about being a female repellent.

"If I am so disgusting to females," Slim told Shmoe, "how do you explain my nine-year-old girlfriend?"

To this, Shmoe had no response and the brief sighting of their three bandmates, Ded "Beavis" Oscarmeyer, Yody "Ary, this sucks" Slowly and Fauna Smiley quieted the two rock stars down. But as soon as the trio saw Slim advancing towards them, they scattered into the crowd, infuriating Shmoe.

"What the fuck's wrong with them? They never do shit. We have to do all the work. I hate them," said Shmoe.

Meanwhile, Slim went back to what he thinks he knows best, rock n' roll. To those nearby, the Neil Young-like sideburned rocker declared, "I know rock n' roll and I love rock n' roll and I'm gonna play some rock n' roll. So throw all your loose change at me and then I'll strip and then I'll give a fake blowjob to Shmoe like Marilyn Manson does."

At the mention of Manson, all the surrounding freaks perked up to hear what was being said about the Reverend. When Shmoe repeated what Slim

Local hardcore hero Onrye Noosebound and his death metal/punk outfit Supa Poultry have been kicking it old school since their inception in early 1993. The band which includes ex-members of Fear Factory, Madball, Napalm Death and some guy who used to work at Taco Bell, have recently signed a multi-album deal with Sony Records. The deal, which includes 17 albums within the next four and a half months, is more than lead singer/glockenspiel player Onrye could have possible dreamed of. "This is downright mutha-fuckin' punk rock, punk rock, PUNK ROCK...I just wanna smash my head on a block of concrete," exclaimed Onrye with much pleasure.

The deal called for each of the 36 members to be given a $37,000 signing bonus, a box of Kool-Aid, and free use of the Sony recording facilities. But, 17 albums in four and a half months? That seems like a lot of material. "The way we write songs is downright mutha-fuckin' punk rock, punk rock, PUNK ROCK!" Onrye responded while slamming his head against the rear bumper of their newly purchased tour bus.

The 36 piece Supa Poultry ensemble has been whippin' a mules ass with a belt for the past three years. Playing with such diverse bands as Satan's Pilgrims, Mariah Carey, and Snoop Doggy Dogg, Supa Poultry has exposed the masses to their post-industrial, gothic, hardcore, square dancing, acoustic, Ugandan tribal punk. They've been met by enthusiastic fans as well as detracting critics. "Our fans are downright mutha-fuckin' punk rock, punk rock, PUNK ROCK!" said Onrye while eating a burrito in the back of their fat tour bus. And the bands critics? "They suck, they wish they were downright mutha-fuckin' punk rock, punk rock, PUNK ROCK!" The critics must listen to Green Day as the Supa Poultry experience is one that moves to the very depths of one's soul.

A typical show has Onrye straddling a garbage barrel, glockenspiel in hand, pounding out furious beats and singing his punk heart out. The rest of the band wears paper bags over their heads and matching purple leotards, giving the band that third grade ballet feel. For example, at last weeks show at the Stone Pony, Supa Poultry's fist stint headlining gig there, Onrye fell into one of his trademark spastic fits. While in the middle of his glockenspiel solo, Onrye had a fellow band member beat him repeatedly with a crow bar. As the blood poured from Onrye's head, he dove into the pit and kicked several female fans in the stomach and spat on his 97 year-old crippled mother.

The Bacon recently received an advanced copy of the band's first release under the new Sony contract. Ham and Swiss ONRYE is a prime example of the sound Onrye was looking for. "The album is downright mutha-fuckin' punk rock, punk rock, PUNK ROCK!" Apparently Onrye is pleased with this effort. "The album makes me want to rub my face with a cheese grater and burn the remains, PUNK ROCK!" He hopes the world shares his view. "I wanna make a lot of money, I think that having a lot of money is downright mutha-fuckin' punk rock, punk rock, PUNK ROCK!"

With all the hype surrounding Supa Poultry, it seems inconceivable that they won't be a smashing success. The basic punk rock ingredients, with that mad hardcore flava, is sure to make Onrye a lot of money. Punk rock lives, and so does death metal, and long hair, and all that other stuff Ary is always talking about.

The Bacon, The Slamcider and The Snorts would like to say goodbye to long time Slamcider editor Ary Nussbaum.

"Relax Slim," Shmoe said, "I have a solution. We'll go onto the stage and just play like we were supposed to and nobody would know we're imposters. They'll just think we're the Bellcurves."

"What are you fuckin' crazy? How can we go onstage and play? That's not cool," Slim screamed. "Would the Chicpeas ever play onstage? Would any of the Long Live Rock Stars artists play onstage? We would lose touch to our audience composed of Scott from Wayne if we played Springfest. We would be like fuckin' Green Day if we played something big like this. We can't do it because the Gilligan Experience wouldn't do it. What would Lolly from Berkeley say? Shmoe, I'm really disappointed you said that."

Fired back Shmoe, "Slim you're an idiot. I hate when you walk around acting like a rock star and then you say playing Springfest would be selling out like Green Day? Man, I hate you sometimes."

And that's when the real trouble started. The two non-violent pizza loving 19-year-olds started to brawl on the campus lawn. All the action stopped when Slim whipped his spare seven-inch...vinyl record and said, "Shmoe, I'll break this authentic Pile of Shit record if you don't stop beating me up."

As quickly as the action climaxed, it subsided completely as the two bandmates kissed and made up before authorities arrived on the scene and the crowd got too big for the Alterna-youths to actually make money.

Then their manager, O.G. of QuarkXPress, explained to the police who the Alterna-youths were, sending Slim and Joe away muttering, "All I know is rock n' roll. Do you want me to play you some rock n' roll? I know rock

WPC unleashes Derby secret Kentucky Derby was held here, not at Churchill Downs

By Aaron T. Homeister and Rosemarie Gryder
MAKE-BELIEVE JOCKIES

The Bacon learned yesterday that the world-famous Kentucky Derby was secretly held not at the historic Churchill Downs in Kentucky, as was originally believed by racing fans everywhere, but rather at Wightman Track, located on the campus of William Paterson College.

The Derby had actually been filmed at WPC last week before an audience of 50,000 actors posing as race fans in front of a secret sound stage set up at Wightman Track before being aired on television Saturday, when it was passed off as a live event.

The filming of the Kentucky Derby at WPC was disguised as the filming of a major major motion picture, said Derby coordinator James "Gambler" A. Holic. To pass of the bullshit story of the movie filming at WPC, Holic said, the college hired a famous Australian actor and a former vocalist of an awful early '90's Boston-based pop group to walk around the campus and tell people that they were here to film a movie.

"The only thing those idiots were filming was a horse race," Holic said. "The Australian hasn't gotten a good part since he screwed up 'Hamlet', and that other guy just wishes he could act."

When asked why the famed Derby was held at WPC rather than Churchill Downs and why the decision was kept a secret until after the event, Holic could give no answer. The Bacon has assumed that the only reason why the great scam was implemented was that the editor of the Snorts Section couldn't think of anything else to write about.

Nobody else could be reached for comment on the matter at hand.

Attention Fans

Get off your asses and go watch your local teams play. All games are free. Today, at Wightman Field (that's the field right in front of Towers), Babe Ruth, Paul Bumbaco and the rest of the WPC baseball team plays Montclair in the battle for the conference crown. Or, if you happen to be vacationing in the Greater Mercer County area, stop by Trenton State U. to watch the WPC softball team play Trenton in the conference playoffs. In case you missed it, the Pioneers traded outfielder Bridget Donovan to the Boston Red Sox for Jose Canseco earlier this week, so things really should be heating up!
