Odd Personages People "Ladies In Retirement"

Two insane sisters and an aging actress with a checkered romantic past, who have retired from this world but not from robbery, treachery, illicit romance, and murder will be the characters of the Pioneer Players' production of LADIES IN RETIREMENT, January 5, 6, and 7 at 8:30 p.m. in the Little Theater.

A lonely house on the marshes near the Thames River in late nineteenth-century England is the setting of this psychological murder play. In the words of Robert Leppert, adviser to the players, "We know 'who done it,' but the problem is how, when, and if the person who did it will be caught."

The cast of Ladies in Retirement is as follows:

Albert Feather — Donald Kommit
Louisa Creed — Kathy Farrell
Sister Theresa — Geraldine Ryzek
Emily Creed — Susan Grebina
Leonora Fisk — Kathi McCann
Ellen Creed — Gail Neary
Lucy — Ann Zinn

Student chairmen of production crews are Adrienne Levine, assistant director; James Clarke, stage man; Vincent Vespe, house man; Dave Homcy, lights; Charles Helwig, sound; Diane Nunn, prompter; Claire Hoffenberg, box office; Nancy Sommer, publicity; Patricia Mazza, costumes.

Tickets are available at no charge in the Cafeteria for PSC students. Guests will be admitted for 25 cents each.

Ladies in Retirement, written by E. Pency and R. Danham, has been produced on the stage, in motion pictures, and on television. Concerning the play, Donald Kirkley of the Baltimore Sun wrote: "... full of those exciting moments which distinguish the living theatre at its best." Harold W. Cohen of the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette said, "It is extremely doubtful if you will witness a better melodrama..."

Boochevers Donate Paintings By Vincent

On Wednesday afternoon, November 30, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Boochever of Montclair, New Jersey, were honored guests of Dr. Shea and the Art Department of the College. Mr. and Mrs. Boochever are the donors of the three distinguished paintings by Tom Vincent which are now displayed on the campus. Two of them are hung in the conference room in Haledon Hall. One is titled "The Isle of Limbo," an idea suggested by a poem which describes the shadowy land somewhere between life and death... "And the black moon decended." The other is "The Apple Vendor," and both in color and in feeling suggests the depths of the depression years. The painting called "The Bridge" is the one in the library. This seems to be a general favorite on the campus, with its majestic perspective and wonderful color.

African Student Adusei-Poku Reveals Views

The International Relations Club of Paterson State College presented Samuel Adusei-Poku of Ghana, a student in economics at the New School for Social Research in New York, as its speaker Thursday, December 1 in the Little Theatre.

Mr. Adusei-Poku tried, in the brief time allotted to him, to give some idea of the crucial problem facing Africa in transition. He told of the sequence of events that led to independence in his own country, and of the struggles to implement that independence with economic progress and political cohesion. He explained why the socialistic approach to industrialization must be used in his own and other underdeveloped countries because there simply is no private local capital available. The government must borrow money to finance public services and economic development, and must control the spending of borrowed funds.

The industrialization of the African states presents many problems besides the technical ones. It moves people from their traditional holdings on the land to towns and cities, breaks up tribal ties, and creates diseases like juvenile delinquency which are an inevitable part of social revolution. All of the newly liberated African countries are aware of the desirability of preserving the best of their own indigenous cultures in a merging of the old and

Four SEA Members Attend Conference; See Latest Trends

Merlinda Marino, Ann Kaminski, Maria Marino, and Pauline Flynn, officers and members of the Student Education Association, attended the All College Student Conference at Jersey City State College December 3, 1960.

The purpose of this all-day meeting was to discuss and explain the new horizons in the field of teacher education and professional standards. The keynote address was delivered by Dr. Thomas E. Robinson, president of Glassboro State College.

From 11:00 a.m. until 12:30 p.m. five discussion groups, headed and coordinated by eminent educators, met and discussed various aspects of new horizons in teacher education. Among those heading education.

After a luncheon, Ken King, president of the Student New Jersey Education Association, and Bill Dunnigan, vice-president of SNJEA, reported on their trip to the student NEA Convention in Los Angeles and San Diego this summer.

TAKE NOTE

Classes will resume Tuesday, January 3, instead of Monday, January 2, as stated in the catalog.

Philbrick To Describe U. S. Red Underground

Herbert Philbrick, who led a triple life as a citizen, "communist", and counterspy for nine years, will be the speaker at the January 10 assembly program at the college. He will speak on "The Red Underground Today."

Philbrick, author of the best-sellers I Led Three Lives and The Queer Fish currently writes a Herald Tribune syndicated column on the Red underground.

S.G.A. Dance

Want to start your Christmas vacation on the "right foot"? On December 17 the SGA will hold its annual semi-formal Christmas Dance in the Memorial Gymnasium. Admission will be free, but student identification cards must be presented at the door. Co-chairmen of the event are Anne Ladika and Lois Brooks.

Music will be provided by Fred Di Maria's band and refreshments will be served in the cafeteria from 10:00 to 11:00 p.m. All faculty members have been invited.

"Winter Wonderland" will be the theme of the dance. The Decorations Committee requests that anyone interested in helping them be at the gym at 9:00 a.m. on Saturday, December 17.

Opportunity To Observe "Genuine Historic Visual Event" Ends Today

An exhibition of drawings and watercolors by the late Auguste Rodin, the 19th century "Father of Modern Sculpture," is currently on exhibit at the Paterson State College campus. The show will last until December 16, and is on exhibit at Hunziker Hall from 9:00-4:30, Monday through Friday.

John Jagel, Assistant Professor in the Art Department of the College says that this is a genuine historic visual event, and that everyone interested in art should see the exhibition. This unique showing was arranged by the Paterson State College Art Department in cooperation with the Meltzer Gallery of New York City. All works are originals assembled over a period of years by the gallery, and all are for sale.

Philbrick's lectures often warn against the hysteria which can develop in the face of communism, the unseen menace. "While we must be cautious... and rightly so... we must not curtail our support of groups and organizations looking for better communities and a stronger and better America."

A television show based upon his experiences stars Richard Carlson. Episodes feature from-the-record dialogue and on-the-scene photography.

Philbrick's association with the Communists began in a rather accidental manner in 1940. As a young, recently married advertising executive, active in community and church affairs, he discovered that Communists had infiltrated a youth group which he headed.

He took this knowledge to the FBI officials, who advised him to remain a member of the organization and report to them. Philbrick agreed and thus his three-sided

Deserving Social Science Majors To Be Rewarded

Dr. Herbert Ellis, chairman of the Social Studies Department, has announced that the department will annually award a book or books to deserving Social Science majors. The deserving students are chosen in the following manner:

Freshman and Sophomore Awards: To the Social Science major who earns in his academic year the highest grade point average and satisfies all basic requirements including good citizenship, a book or books, approximately ten dollars in value.

Junior and Senior Awards: Two awards, one to a junior and one to a senior enrolled in Social Science electives, for either of the following: 1) an outstanding term paper demonstrating mastery of a subject by analytic, thoughtful, and well-ordered presentation; 2) an outstanding short paper such as an analytic or critical report upon a subject or a book. The prizes will be a book or books, approximately ten dollars in value.

Graduating Majors: To be awarded to the Social Science majors in the graduating class with the highest cumulative grade point average and whose activities and interests have indicated academic competence, potentiality as teachers, and good citizenship. The prizes will be: first prize, a book or books of about twenty five dollars in value; second prize, a book or books of about fifteen dollars in value.

Intellects Need No Vacation!

What are some of the possible ways a holiday break from school can be utilized. With very little thought many can be discovered rest, a time to catch-up with those things neglected because of lack of time, renewing old acquaintances, earning money and so on.

But if one sincerely means to accomplish much in his life, he had better learn not to disassociate those so-called vacations from his integrated living continuum. In simpler words, all actions and events surrounding a person constitute his environment and thus will direct his experiences; and the sum total of these experiences will compose his living. This total will in turn be brought to bear upon all his social contacts. Then what are we saying. A conscientious person continually builds character by at least attempting to carefully control components which constitute his environment.

Everyone, I'm sure wishes to be worthy of his existence, the rationalization is simple for some but much more difficult for others—for those sincere others. It is not an easy task to always keep this in mind but this is the only sure way to become someone great. This does not say that any sort of enjoyment during the vacation period is wrong, but it only calls for intelligent evaluation of the situations one may become involved in and a careful evaluation as to its worth as far as the person is concerned. "In this making a better person?" is a question that should be continually asked.

Christmas vacation starts December 16, and ends January 3. These 17 days can and should be profitably used by all. A joy is a valid emotion and as such should be enjoyed by all. It's pleasant ingredient necessary for proper social development. With all sincerity do have a joyous holiday season, but do not give your intellect a holiday. Intellect, flavored with emotion, does make any time holiday time.

Freshman's Future Rests On Initiative

By Emma Trifiletti

The close of the first semester of college for many of the freshmen offers varied opinions of college life. Scholastically, they are faced with an entirely new system of testing and grading. Socially, they have reached the turning point of their lives. No longer are they dependent on high school teachers; college lends to independence and maturity.

For those who do not accept this new system of education, scholastically and socially, they will not find their way to Paterson State next semester. Many have dropped out already, and still others will leave before the sophomore year.

One reason for this disqualification is the mid-semester and final examinations. These examinations play a decisive role in determining the future of all students. It is most important that serious consideration by all freshman intending to enter sophomore year be given to these points. If you can seriously answer the following questions with a definite yes, then your chances of success at P.S.C. are assured.

1. Are you regularly attending classes?
2. Are you up to date with your assignments?
3. Do you put effort into your work?
4. Are you doing your best to understand your courses?
5. Do you study more than what is required?

"EDUCATION IS A TREASURE THAT CAN NEVER BE TAKEN FROM YOU."

Futile Sonnet

The pious deeds of peaceful men are done:
They fled in danger through the dismal snows
Like wounded bruts dispersed by loaded guns
That charged the death of many vanquished foes.
A spiteful folly known to hungry thought:
That sullen, weary appetite of pain
Still stings the tender fruit that nature wrought
Through sorrow joined with desperate disdain.
Triumphant valor hides the battle-scars
Of war's disgust upon the fighting force
That once knew life before the wrath of Mars.
In retribution halted quick their course.
If there be pity in death's angry plea
Then let the mighty stand eternally.

"What Is Jazz?"

THE KETTLE — Caldwell College for Women, Caldwell, New Jersey

There isn't a person in America who hasn't used or heard the word JAZZ in some form or another. This is a pretty safe statement to make. Jazz is one form of music for which America can take credit. From where did it come? Let us turn back the musical pages about three centuries. During the time of the Plymouth settlement, American music consisted of a few folk songs which men and women sang around the campfires.

One of the reasons for the slow development of American music was the lack of a desirable foundation upon which American composers could build something new and different. It wasn't until the late nineteenth century that German Romanticism brought about stronger feelings of emotion and more liberal forms of composing. Our composers also realized that other countries such as Norway, Russia, and Spain used their folk songs as a foundation in developing their music. It wasn't until then that American composers learned to utilize Indian and Negro tunes as a springboard for our music.

By the beginning of the twentieth century, Jazz was well on its way. Many small bands were being formed consisting of all varieties of instruments. Did the people like this new type of music? Many considered it too loud and in very poor taste. However, it wasn't long before the new rhythm caught fire, and the people began to dance and clap their hands to the music. We must consider that it was a little different from the Jazz we speak of today. If one heard a recording of Louis Armstrong made thirty years ago, he would hardly think it to be good music. Compare the present day automobile with that of thirty years ago.

Just what is Jazz? Because of the many and varied differences of opinion, Jazzmen have not been able to agree on any one definition. However, the different types of Jazz are known as Dixieland, Ragtime, Be Bop, and the Blues. Melodically, Jazz is very similar to other types of music. It is rhythmically that Jazz varies greatly from any other form of music existing today. The chords are arranged in basically simple progressions and the most common key used is the key of B flat.

Many musicians have contributed to the fields of Jazz. Some of the most popular are Louis Armstrong, the Dorsey Brothers, Dizzy Gillespie, Count Basie, and many others.

It takes much study of the classics, a fine knowledge of instruments, as well as of theory and harmony, to be a Jazz musician. Let us not sell short the ability of these great men.

Five Minute Overtime Decides 61-60 Victory For Paterson

The Paterson State Pioneers defeated the undefeated Montclair five, Friday, December 2, on a foul shot by Jack Padalino in the last six seconds of a five-minute overtime.

After a see-saw half, Montclair seemed to be running away in the third quarter. While on offense in the third quarter, almost every shot that was thrown up by Montclair seemed to find its way to the basket. While on defense, they were applying the pressure. We were down nine points when Armond Palmisano got hot. He sank four shots in a row to give Paterson 8 points. The clock read 9:07 and the tally on points read Montclair 42 — Paterson 41. Montclair never actually lost this lead until Padalino sunk his foul shot in the last six seconds of the five-minute overtime to put Paterson in the lead 61—60.

Before I close, let me say that I think a major factor in the Montclair victory is the school spirit that was displayed. The cheers that were led, the shouts that came from the spectators, and most of all, the number of Paterson rooters meant something — not only to ourselves and our school, but to the boys out there on the court. With more of the same, victories will be inevitable and school spirit incomparable.

On one hand, he remained an average citizen, working at his profession to make a living for his family. Secondly, he became a member of the Young Communist League in 1942, joined the party two years later, and rose to become a member of the Pro-4 group, which masterminded communist strategy in the area.

Thirdly Philbrick assumed the role of the counterspy for the FBI. After attending cell meetings of the party, he spent hours hidden in an attic room, writing detailed reports of what he had seen.

Besides the danger of being discovered as a fraud by the communists, Philbrick could expect no help or recognition from the FBI if the U. S. government discovered his Communist affiliation and arrested him on charges of "subversion." This made his task doubly dangerous.

Philbrick testified against the eleven top Red in 1949 and helped in their convictions. With this, his roles as Communist and counterspy were ended.

Today, Philbrick lives in a New York suburb with his wife, Eva, and their six children, five daughters and one son. His hobbies are photography, and playing the organ.

The assembly will be in the Memorial Gymnasium at 1:30 p.m.

Men's Fencing Team Promises A "Better Than Ever" Season

This year the men's fencing team promises to have a better season than last year. This year they are fencing in more schools in the metropolitan area. Last year they won a little less than half of their meets and took two individual medals at the N.C.E. tournament. This year they expect to win almost all of their meets, and at least one of the weapon's trophies at N.C.E. This is more than wishful thinking or high hopes.

They have almost all of last year's team plus a group of promising freshmen. An added advantage is the fact that many of these freshmen are fencing in two of the three weapons: foil, epee, and sabre, instead of only one weapon. In order to test their skill against better and older fencers, they are entering as many of the Amateur Fencer's League of America competitions as possible. (All of the team members are A.F.L.A. members). In this competition, it is every man for himself, and the experience comes hard and fast.

His generous gift is the right step in that direction.

the new; but the difficulty of achieving this is complicated by the language barriers which make communication problems almost unsolvable. The old colonial governments did not try to cut across tribal lines but worked within them; consequently, it is left to the new governments to work this out as best they can.

Adusei-Poku explained at some length the reasons why the new African governments do not feel that they are selling their sovereignty by accepting material aid from Russia. They believe that they must get help wherever they can — if not from the West, then from the East. This does not mean that they agree politically with the countries from which they accept help. For instance, the Israeli Development Company is a big operator in Ghana because Ghana feels that it has everything in common with Israeli economically, although not politically. They feel the same way about Liberia and Ethiopia.

Adusei-Poku believes that it would be a good thing for everyone concerned if countries like the United States would send into Africa young people in the diplomatic and economic missions who could stay long enough to feel at home, get to know both people and problems from first hand observation and participation, and then who would be available for advice on problems especially connected with the new governments.

The problems of education in the new African countries are crucial, Adusei-Poku said. Russia has offered liberal grants to students who will come to study at Russian universities. For some years, Ghanaian students have gone to Great Britain to study, and now there are a number studying in the United States. About 85% of all school age children are now in some sort of school, and a program has been set up to try to eradicate illiteracy among adults. The Africa-America Institute sent over 20 teachers to help in the education program in Ghana and Nigeria last year, and this year has sent 40.

Altogether, with patience and understanding and time, the new African nations hope to be able to solve their own problems in their own way.

An Oldster Advisers

My high school graduation came in the year '33,
But alas there was no college then in store for me.
Remember reading about the big poverty show?
Depression, bread lines, selling apples, just no dough.
In '33 the situation was still sad;
My family's finances were quite bad.

So to work went this dejected and disappointed lass,
No hope to join any '37 college class.
The desire for a college career was no longer mine.
It was more important for the family to dine.

And then many years later there came within my sight
The facilities at Paterson State, and there grew a light,
For the learning I was not able to obtain,
The desire which through the years dormant had lain,
But which quickly awakened at the very thought,
A college education for me could still be sought.

So I with nerves a twitter at this late date
This September enrolled at Paterson State.
I find my mind coming slowly awake.
I know I have a great deal here at stake,
But not as much as you whose ages are still the teens.
I hope you, as I, appreciate just what college means.
Hard work, time and effort put to good use;
Opportunities you should not abuse!

This is your chance as well as it is mine
To create a future that will be fine,
A career that will fill you with many a joy,
Seeing understanding come to a girl or boy.

So apply yourself today and all the days to your task.
In the sunlight of education forever bask,
For you are lucky to be here in your youth.
Remember I waited twenty-seven years, and that's the truth!

"What I Expect From a Beginning Teacher" was the topic discussed by Larence E. Hinchey, Superintendent of Schools of Montclair, New Jersey, at the December 15 meeting of the Student Education Association.

Dr. Hinchey has been Superintendent of Schools in Montclair since 1951. Prior to that date he was deputy Superintendent of Schools in Schenectady, New York. The University of Michigan was the site of his study for his bachelor's, master's, and doctorate degrees.

This was the last meeting of the SEA for this semester. All students and faculty were invited to attend at 1:30 in room 201 of Hunziker Hall.

Hospitality Club

With the start of the new semester, the Hospitality Club will be having round table discussions on various subjects. These short talks by the students will be on such topics as Balls and Dances which will include ballroom etiquette, the reception line, etc. Another will be Party Giving, which will include buffet suppers, eons, formal dinners, foreign dish-luncheons, formal dinners, foreign dishes, and the idea of "cook, waitress, hostess" in one. In this series one meeting will incorporate two subjects: the Art of Conversation and Flower Arrangement.

The members of this club served as hostesses at the Alumni Dinner on Dec. 2 as usherettes at the annual Christmas Assembly on Dec. 15.

Mrs. Sally Burk

Attention: Digging Research Hounds

Termpaper specialist, Mrs. Sally Burk, is always ready, willing, and able to render her services to ever digging research hounds.

Everyone from the frazzled freshmen to the sophisticated seniors can depend upon this vivacious librarian to help him with any paper or report that requires much delving into the subject matter.

Mrs. Burk, who has been serving at PSC for 11 years, graduated from Douglass College and received her L.S. 261, 262 at Columbia University, and her Master's in Library Service at Rutgers University.

She is a member of the New Jersey Library Association, the College and University Section, N.J.L.A., and the Bergen-Passaic Library Club A.A.U.W.

Chess club members ponder their next moves at a three-board meeting in T3C.

Spotlighting

Chess Club

The CHESS CLUB is a new activity at Paterson State College. It was formed by a group of students who felt that chess should have an important place in the extracurricular activities of the college. Chess is invaluable to the student for it disciplines the mind, instills organization, and gives security. In chess the student can find accomplishment, pride, and delight. Once the moves have been mastered, a new and wonderful world is opened to the player.

Contrary to popular opinion, an I.Q. of 140 or better is not a prerequisite to learning the game. In Milwaukee, over ten thousand school children participate in a municipal chess project each year. The USSR has tens of millions of players, for chess is their national game.

The aims of the club are many, but mainly we wish to stimulate an interest in chess at Paterson State. We will teach the game to anyone who has a desire to learn and we will help to improve the game of those who play. We offer competition among players of equal skill. In this connection we have initiated the first Chess Tournament to be held at Paterson State College. When the results are known, interested students will be able to compete with others on their own skill level.

Come to our meetings every Thursday in Room T3C at 1:30. Attend, and be rewarded by the world of chess.
