WPC students attend anti-war march, rally

By Jennifer King

Twenty WPC students were among the 75,000 protesters who journeyed to the nation's capital Saturday to protest U.S. intervention in the Middle East.

Protesters representing almost every state in the union assembled at noon on the mall in front of the capital building to exchange their thoughts and feelings in the form of banners, songs, chants and conversation.

Signs which read "No blood for oil" and "Support the troops by waging peace, stop the war in the Middle East" represented popular sentiment among the protesters.

Sentiment against President Bush was prevalent also, as conveyed in signs which read "Bush pull out, we wish your father had" and "Read my lips: no Bushit."

Protesters scoffed at the belief, which they said is media-supported, that the United States and its alter ego, "the business man," is concerned with the liberation of Kuwait and not its own bank account.

WPC STUDENTS RESPOND

The entire world ignored this "mad man" until he started messing with oil, said Kevin Ashworth, president of People for Peace.

"War is childish and useless, yet it is accepted by many people," said one WPC student who preferred to remain anonymous.

"We should have allowed the sanctions to go farther than they did. Five months is not enough time," said Rose Alcala, WPC senior.

PROTESTERS

A fully-uniformed navy serviceman from West Virginia received a warm reception from fellow protesters. Called to active duty on July 1, he said he is not sure what he would do if called to serve in Saudi Arabia.

He explained that he supports and participates in the armed services as they are a necessary unit of strength and defense for the United States. However, he views the war in the Middle East as an attempt

Apartments to get cable, Towers may regain lost stations

By Brad Weisberger

EDITOR-IN-CHIEF

Premium cable channels previously provided by UA Columbia have been shut off to Towers residents as of Jan. 14. The apartments are scheduled to receive cable hook-up this week and will receive the same channels the Towers residents now receive. The premium channels shut off included CNN, ESPN, TNT and others that cannot be received without a cable hook-up, said Murat Senyigit, SGA president.

The stations which formerly carried the premium channels were replaced with an information screen telling viewers that the various premium channels were no longer available and instructing them to contact the SGA for further details, Senyigit said.

Subsequently, the SGA office has received dozens of inquiries about the loss of these channels, Senyigit said.

The SGA is now in the process of preparing a referendum to be distributed to residents, which students will sign if they would allow $1.10 per month to be deducted from their security deposits in order to resume premium cable services, Senyigit said.

"A very high proportion of the residents would have to give affirmative responses for us to go ahead with this," Senyigit said. Cable is hooked up so that either all or none of the residents can receive cable.

Senyigit has made arrangements with Residence Life to facilitate the distribution of the referendum and the implementation of the actual plan.

"Premium cable stations could be operating by Feb. 14 or sooner if the residents want them," Senyigit said.

Originally the cable company had provided the signal to be used in a laboratory setting for communication majors, said Anthony Lolli, vice president of Enrollment Management. However, they did assist the Communication Department in distributing the signal throughout the campus, which allowed it to reach the Towers.

Last summer, UA Columbia said it did not intend this service to be used in the residence halls free of charge and expressed its desire to cut the service if the residents did not pay for it, Lolli said.

The administration allowed the SGA to decide on various options in the event cable services were shut off. One of these options included the installation of a satellite dish, Lolli said. The SGA decided to wait before making a decision, since there was a belief that the service might not be cut.

Senyigit believes the cable service should be restored to residents, he said.

"It is educational and important, especially in regard to the present Persian Gulf crisis," Senyigit said.

Campus groups focus on war Teach-in, candlelight vigil featured this week

By Andrew Scott

ASSISTANT NEWS EDITOR

A teach-in on the Middle East and a candlelight vigil for the troops will be held this Wednesday, sponsored by the Student Mobilization Committee (SMC), People for Peace, the Political Science Department continues until 5:00 p.m. The vigil, which begins at 5:30 in Caldwell Plaza, will be in support of the troops currently in the Persian Gulf, in remembrance of the Vietnam veterans suffering from Agent Orange and in honor of all MIAs and POWs in the Persian Gulf and elsewhere, Levy said. There will be said Levy and Robert Kidd, SMC vice president and member of People for Peace.

On Feb. 2, SMC and the Northeastern Coalition for Peace in the Middle East will sponsor a demonstration at the Montclair Recruiting Station, 691 Plymouth Avenue in Montclair, Kidd said.

On Feb. 13 (Ash Wednesday) the SMC will hold another candlelight vigil, he said.

"SMC feels the best way to support our troops is to bring them back alive," Kidd said. "We demand a cease of hostilities and a peaceful solution to the Middle East situation. We completely oppose any reactivation of the draft."

ment, WPC Coalition for Peace in the Middle East and some members of the WPC faculty, said Hal Levy, president of the SMC.

The teach-in begins at 9:30 a.m. in the Ballroom and con-a microphone open to speakers at the vigil.

These are just two of the events planned by groups such as the SMC and People for Peace to show concern for the situation in the Middle East,

$35,000 project brings cable to apartments after three-year dispute

By Brad Weisberger
EDITOR-IN-CHIEF

By the middle of this week, cable hook-up for the apartments will be complete. Unlike the Towers, which were built in 1981 and installed with cable, the apartments were built with a master antenna which no longer functions. The installation of cable to the apartments is part of a $35,000 project. This project connects the Rec Center and the apartments with a link, which carries the campus phone system, capabilities for computer networks and cable television, said Peter Spiridon, vice-president of Administration and Finance.

In the future, the computer link will allow access to library computer facilities by using personal computers (PCs) in the residence halls. It will also allow residents and faculty to communicate using PC terminals, said Anthony Lolli, vice-president of Enrollment Management.

This project, which began more than three years ago, was delayed by a dispute between the college and New Jersey Bell. The dispute was over who owned the telephone poles on campus and the degree of liability incurred by each party, Spiridon said. It was eventually necessary to have the New Jersey attorney general intervene to settle the matter and relieve the concerns of both parties.

Foundation grants raises to managers

By Domenick Stampone
STAFF WRITER

The WPC Foundation decided to allocate raises to its managers following a fall evaluation of its managerial staff, said Joe Tanis, executive director of the Foundation. The raises went into effect as of 1991. The Foundation is the non-profit corporation which oversees the Student Center.

"We try to keep pace with the college [administration] to make sure that our employees do not receive more or less than college employees. The raises will affect professional staff, directors and assistant directors. Directors will receive an average of 4.5 percent raises and assistant directors will receive an average of 9 percent raises. All told there are 18 managers," Tanis said.

The raises will not cost students more money, Tanis said.

"Raises actually came in under what we budgeted for," he said.

The Foundation runs on a yearly operating budget of $4.5 million, of which $2 million goes toward salaries of full-time staff and student workers, taxes and fringe benefits, Tanis said.

"The Foundation gets $2.6 million of its operating budget from retail sales from the Bookstore, Pioneer Gear, the arcade, etc. Also, $600,000 comes from student fees along with some money from rentals, commissions and interest," Tanis said.

The decision to approve money for raises within the Foundation's budget was approved by its Board of Directors last year, Tanis said. The Foundation Board of Directors includes President Speert, a representative from the Board of Trustees, seven citizens of the community at large and two student members.

After the raises were approved, Tanis became personally responsible for evaluating the performance of the directors and assistant directors and reporting his recommendations to the Board of Directors for final approval.

"Since my staff is relatively small I can personally evaluate each of their performances," Tanis said.

What about next time?

Much of the world community, including a large portion of the American public, has come to the conclusion that the actions of Iraqi leader Saddam Hussein cannot be tolerated. President Bush has promised to utilize the full force of the United States to bring about a military victory. The overwhelming fire power of the "allied" fighting force assembled will most likely prevail, but at great cost in both blood and money. The administration maintains that potential aggressors of the future will be deterred from hostile action. Unfortunately the precedent for war as a solution to crisis will have been reinforced. In addition, we have fought wars in the past, none of which have seemed to deter Hussein. This thought pattern seems to suggest that a war must be fought every few years to remind the world that aggression will not be tolerated.

Hussein invaded Kuwait because his economy was in desperate straits resulting from his long war with Iran. Since the sanctions began prices of food staples rose by 100 percent and various commodities were being rationed by the government. Some have maintained the argument that Hussein would have been undeterred because of his disregard for the welfare of his people. Yet one must ask how long his people would tolerate it, and how long his military machine would be able to survive without spare parts, fuel and other necessities?

Imagine if President Bush had used the full might of the United States to force the economic sanctions to work. If they could have succeeded, it could very well have meant that future aggressors could be stopped without the firing of a single shot. If sanctions failed, the military option remained and the enemy might even have been a little bit hungrier. It was once said that starting war is like entering a dark room, and one knows not what lies on the other side. We do not know what the casualties will be like, nor the long-term outcome of this war, but we can be certain that the chance for peaceful solutions to future crises will be undermined.

Link says thanks

I want to take this opportunity to publicly acknowledge the WPC community for its invaluable support and assistance during the three years that Project LINK operated on the WPC campus.

Project LINK, a federally-supported project, was designed to provide postsecondary youth who have mild handicaps (members) with increased opportunities to experience "normalcy" and success, and to practice being independent adults. The day-to-day program was managed by undergraduates (mentors), most of whom majored in special education. The program consisted of classroom instruction, work experiences and social and recreational activities.

The college community gave LINK members the opportunity to work in supervised settings all over the campus. In addition, support from the Dean of Students' Office and the WPC Foundation made it possible for LINK's members to feel that they belonged on the campus; they were treated "just like everybody else."

While participating in Project LINK, most members met with more success than they'd experienced at any other time in their lives! Without the interest, acceptance and involvement of individuals from every sector of the college community, the goals of Project LINK could not have been accomplished.

On behalf of the members, mentors and the Project LINK staff, our thanks to each person who contributed to the overall effort. To the work site supervisors, department leadership, decision makers and facilitators, special thanks is due. You have touched lives and made an impact that can last a lifetime.

Delay tuition payment

The cancelling of 140 classes and the firing of first- and second-year professors should be enough to bring this campus to its feet. I will leave the debating to others. Action is required.

ALL students should enroll in the Partial Payment Plan. Delaying payment will not hurt the students and will force the administration to look hard at where our priorities lie. Go to the rallies, write letters, and pay in part for only part of a college education.

SMC resolved

With the current war in the Persian Gulf, we the members of the Student Mobilization Committee (SMC) of WPC have unanimously passed the following demands and statements:

1. That the SMC completely supports our troops in the Persian Gulf, and that we feel the best way to support our troops is to bring them back home.

2. That the SMC demands a complete end to the hostilities.

3. That the SMC demands that a Middle East Peace Conference be convened to solve this crisis without any more loss of human life.

4. That the SMC renounces any re-activation of the policy of subscription by the United States of America's military.

We have asked that these demands are achieved expediently. If you have any questions about our demands please contact us in Student Center 301.

Sincerely on behalf of the SMC,

WPC community voices

This week The Insider decided to let members of the WPC community do some work for us by expressing their views concerning the war in the gulf. We appreciate your responses to this sensitive issue at a difficult time for everyone. In a democratic society such as ours, the feelings of the people can and should be expressed. Indeed, this is a major part of the "way of life" that our soldiers are protecting. The Insider fully supports our troops in the Middle East.

Alice McCormack, Insider Editor

—Jill Breir
Junior, English literature

Although I fully support our troops in the Gulf, I want them to come home alive. I don't believe that the U.S.'s actions are justifiable. The people who support this war don't realize that there were many peaceful solutions to be considered before we even sent our troops there.

—Shell Rosa, sophomore music studies

War in any form is terrible, but this is a situation which warrants taking a maniac who is in charge, putting aside past mistakes and trying to rectify a sticky situation. The best we can do is root for the troops' safe return and work toward a future of peace.

—Ira Shulman
senior, history

Nobody wants to see our armed forces travel thousands of miles for such abstract principles as freedom of trade, resistance of foreign aggression. However, these things do and can threaten our freedom in America. The annexation of Kuwait by Iraq not only runs counter to our interests in the Persian Gulf, but changes the balance of world power and thus changes all policies and interests for all countries throughout the world. War is never good, but it is sometimes a necessary evil.

—Henry M. Garl
senior, English

What are we really there for? Are we there for oil or for imperialistic interests. Are we there for the intrusions of the Iraqi military, or are we just respecting some line that took that part of Iraq and turned it into Kuwait. Perhaps resolutions would have worked; we did let them last 30 years against the U.S.S.R. And what about the Palestinian question, and those U. S. Resolutions.

support for troops in gulf

—Murat Senyigit, SGA president
senior, business marketing

I am hesitant to give a response because I realize there is so much information that we are not privy to. However, based on what I know, I think our government should have ascertained a peaceful solution, such as giving sanctions more time to work. However, since they have not and we are in the war, then we should support our soldiers and our government and push them to find an expedient end to this nightmare.

—Laura C. Perry, SGA treasurer
senior, business

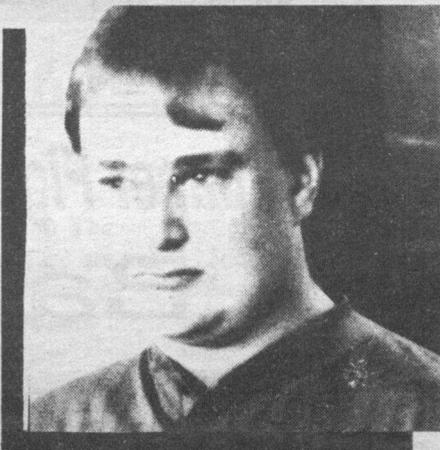

In my opinion, it is disheartening to come to the realization that international disputes cannot be settled in a peaceful manner. However, as a powerful nation the United States has a responsibility to not allow a dictator to aggress against another country. As things progress, the actions of Hussein, such attacks on Israel, and disregard for the rights of POWs, further strengthens my support of U.S. actions in the Middle East.

—Anita Mohinani

War has never been a solution for our world. We have been fighting wars for centuries. Nothing has been achieved. I am sure all conflict can be solved over a meeting table, however long it takes.

—Ken Hammett

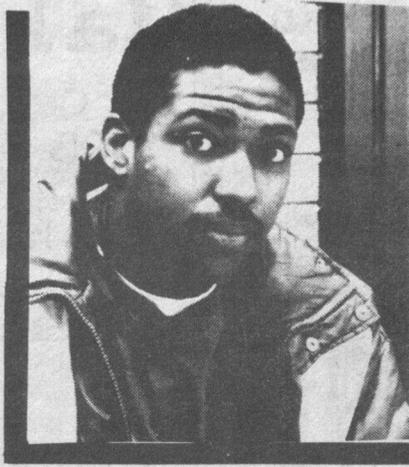

I support the troops in a time of emergency like this, but think it's important for the American people to show that we're behind them even though some might not agree with the purpose of the war."

—Olicia Cameron
freshman, communication

I think it's sad because I have a lot of friends and family there. In fact, I was supposed to go there but I was in an accident so I could not go. President Bush should have waited a while since half of them <troops> don't even know why they are fighting. Bush also should have explained more thoroughly why we are there.

—Corey Bell
freshman, communication

I think war is a bunch of bull. This war says to me that there is no way of avoiding violence--a big issue in everyday life.

—Ed Matthews
Director, Theatre Dept.

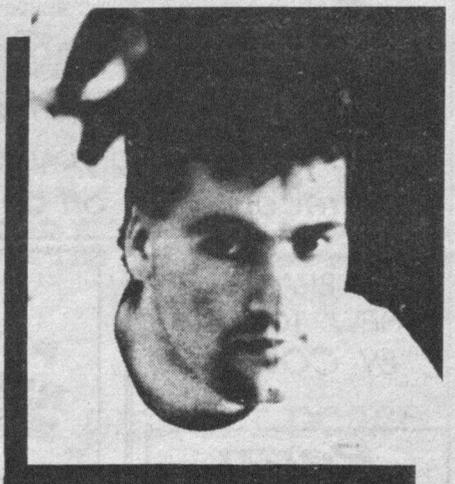

The Democratic process still evolving in this country supported the view that the Iraqi president should be prohibited from possessing Kuwait and its wealth. For, with this wealth the Middle East situation would be much worse in 5-10 years, and our allies, including Israel would be overwhelmed by the Iraqi war machine.

—Cara Palumbo
junior, communication

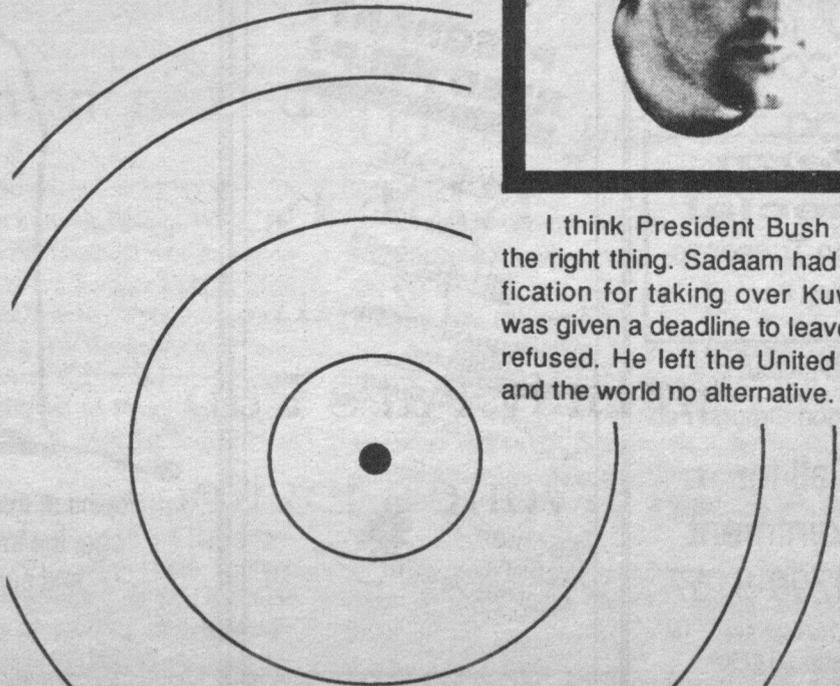

No one likes war, but this is something that we must do. Saddam Hussein is a madman, killing innocent people--even his own. I stand behind President Bush and all of the troops, especially my boyfriend, who has been on active duty for six months. We should stand together as one, put our political views aside and support Bush and all of our fine men and women.

—Rob Nestor
senior, English writing

I think President Bush is doing the right thing. Sadaam had no justification for taking over Kuwait. He was given a deadline to leave and he refused. He left the United Nations and the world no alternative.

After Saddam Hussein's unjustified invasion of Kuwait, the United States had many possible responses. We chose a two-step approach. First, economic sanctions were imposed against Iraq, backed up by a massive buildup of troops to show United States resolve. If this did not force Hussein to leave Kuwait by an arbitrary date, then in the second step war would begin.

The reason for the first step is clear. It is in the "interest of the United States" to maintain control of the vast reserves of oil in the Mideast. We have had such control for many decades. Our economy is based on the easy accessibility of oil and this control guarantees it. We want no one else to gain too much power in the region.

The other reasons given by President Bush for the large U.S. presence in the Persian Gulf are purely propaganda. We are not there to "liberate" Kuwait. Kuwait was not a free, democratic country before and its former rulers are no more "legitimate" than Saddam Hussein. We are not there to stop Hussein's aggression. When Hussein was waging war against Iran, the U.S. government thought that was fine—apparently some aggression is good. When the Kurds were gassed in Iraq the U.S. government stood idly by—it was not in

"our interest" to intervene. We are not even there to punish and stop a brutal tyrant. The U.S. government, including Bush personally, have in the very recent past supported Hussein. Tyranny is acceptable, as long as it dovetails with "U.S. interests."

The reasons for taking the second step—war—are much less clear. Waiting for economic sanctions to work would probably have been more in the "interest of the United States." It is unclear what winning the war will mean, but it is unlikely that it will further protect "U.S. interests." War gives Hussein the possibility to play the hero, fighting the most powerful army in the world; it gives him a great opportunity to enhance his standing in the Arab world. Indeed, this already appears to be happening, with Arabs in many countries supporting Hussein more and more strongly. Also, war is a drastic measure, and the fact that hundreds of thousands of non-Arabs are attacking an Arab country will surely diminish U.S. credibility among Arabs. On the grounds of "U.S. interest" alone, this war should have been avoided.

So why did Bush feel compelled to attack Iraq? One possible answer is that he felt that during the time economic sanctions would take to work, the international coalition against Hussein would weaken. He probably feels that war will stop Hussein more quickly than sanctions and that the coalition will stay together better during war.

Another factor in Bush's decision to wage war is his self image and how it is projected to the public. In the period leading up to the war Bush was intransigent, unwilling to negotiate, but he portrayed himself as a tough, macho leader. Going to war is a sure way to maintain his non-wimp image.

Bush is nothing if not a cold, calculating politician. War is popular as long as we win quickly. Since Bush thought that this would be the case, why not attack? His decision has paid off. In a Times/CBS News poll taken one day after the war began, his job approval rating increased dramatically—from 66 percent five days earlier to 86 percent. An early end to the war would solidify his popularity.

The war in the Persian Gulf is a tragic mistake. Tens of thousands of people may die so that the United States may maintain its hegemony [the predominant influence of one state over others]. The "new world order" looks suspiciously like the old one.

Andrea Dworkin's remarks as printed in The Beacon are a very deliberate attempt to abuse her First Amendment rights by spreading distortions in order to suppress others' First Amendment rights. I speak of her statements regarding pornography.

Doubtless, many of the feminists and supporters on campus also opposed laws against flag burning on First Amendment grounds. The public outcry against flag burning demonstrated the great degree to which it bothered people. But the First Amendment forces them to suffer it anyway. Likewise it requires Andrea Dworkin to tolerate something that they really hate, namely pornography.

Dworkin is also guilty of overgeneralizing and lying. It is not legal for males or females to have sex with animals, nor to film it. It is certainly not legal to dismember people. The main theme of all pornography is not rape. Either Dworkin cares nothing for facts or she is deliberately lying. Either way she detracts seriously from the case she makes.

Are wives "often" hurt by husbands who try to duplicate pornography? I think that is an exaggeration. Male society does not say that women enjoy pain. A very small, very sick percentage of men believe that.

There are men and women who enjoy pornography. There are "hardcore" pornographers who act illegally to appeal to a disturbed portion of the population. There are also corporations that exploit workers, politicians who exploit constituents, and priests who exploit their parishes. All of these cause harm, yet we regulate, not prohibit.

Women deserve equal pay, equal rights, equal opportunities and equal representation. Lying, distorting and censoring are not the ways to achieve such goals.

Society is wrong to teach women that self defense is "unfeminine." Women can teach men that they do not need to assert their masculinity by oppressing women. Women do not need to teach anyone censorship. History is full of characters who tried to direct people's minds through censorship, and it hasn't worked yet.

Timothy R. Nicinski is a junior here at WPC. He is also a United States Marine reservist who had been in the process of organizing the Semper Fidelis Club on campus. Tim was called to active duty the day after Thanksgiving. He spent a few weeks training with the Light Armored Infantry at Camp Lejeune, North Carolina before being deployed to Saudi Arabia on Dec. 18. He is on the front lines with the 2nd Marine Division.

I am his fiancée and I felt that his fellow students should be aware of the service he is doing our country. I am in full support of Operation Desert Shield/Storm and I thank every man and woman there for the sacrifices they are making on my behalf. No one wanted a war, but it is too late to continue arguing that point.

Tim is very proud to be serving his country. As he put it in a recent letter, "I am proud to be a U.S. Marine, a military personnel and an American."

These men are standing up for you and I. We owe them our appreciation and support until this horror ends. Tim needs our encouragement and receiving mail is very important to him. His address is:

Do your part for peace

We need to do our part for PEACE. Last semester we conducted a one-hour Peace Reflections event in the Ballroom.

This was an opportunity for WPC students, faculty and staff members to share reflections, poetry, prayers or music with the theme of PEACE.

I would like to invite the WPC community to continue this event. Starting Monday, Jan. 28, the Catholic Campus Ministry Center will be a weekly gathering place for Peace Reflections '91, at 4:45 p.m..

Bring your reflections and especially names of those in the Persian Gulf for whom we need to pray.

Giants are Champions

Last night, Ottis Anderson and the New York Giants offense stole the show as the Giants won the 25th Super Bowl.

Anderson scored one touchdown to lead the Giants offense. The Giants kept the ball for a Super Bowl record 40-plus minutes to overwhelm the Bills defense.

In a game without turnovers, both teams struggled to get the advantage. On a last-second miss of a field goal attempt by Bills kicker Scott Norwood, the Giants prevailed 20-19.

Jeff Hostetler proved that he deserved to lead the Super Bowl champions to this extraordinary game. In a game that should not have been lost by either team, the Giants proved that all their hard work had paid off.

In the ever-important Bud Bowl, Bud Light beat Bud in an upset by the score of 23-21. Newly-acquired Bud Dry ran back a kickoff with no time remaining to lead Bud Light to a stellar performance.

In the NHL, it looks like injuries have hit the New York Rangers again.

Kessler's Corner By Scott Kessler

Just as things look bright for the Rangers, two more players went down with injuries. Center Bernie Nicholls suffered a separated shoulder on January 22 and defenseman Normand Rochefort broke a finger.

Nicholls should be out approximately three weeks and Rochefort will be out for one to two weeks. With King and Erixon injured frequently, it should be interesting to see if they can stay atop the Patrick Division and win the Stanley Cup for the first time in 51 years.

In the NBA, the Nets improved their team with the acquisitions of Terry Mills from Denver and Drazen Petrovic from Portland.

The Nets now have turned into a contender this year than last year as a pretender. After their long losing streak, they beat the Bulls last week and looked exceptionally well doing so.

The Knicks (although I don't want to jinx them), might have finally turned things around. Last week, they beat the 76ers twice and Utah by large margins.

Though no trade were made, the starting line-up hasn't been the same. Maybe Coach MacLeod has finally found his two favorite starters to be John Starks and Brian Quinett.

In other news, for all you sports fans who enjoy catching up to sports highlights and information, it looks like you'll have to wait until Mondays for my column because the school took away ESPN from our cable.

I would not like to end without sending my best wishes and hopes to all our men and women fighting for our country.

Answer to last Beacon's trivia question, the five Heisman trophy winners that are still playing in the NFL are Bo Jackson, Marcus Allen, Barry Sanders, Herschel Walker, and Mike Rozier.

This week's trivia question: In Super Bowl history, only one coach has lost a Super Bowl game in three decades. Name him.

Quote of the week: Chicago Bulls superstar Michael Jordan on playing golf with Detroit Pistons' bad boy Bill Laimbeer- "I would play golf with him but he would probably foul me on the way to the hole."

Lady Pioneers now 14-4

Besides Jones' season-long heroics, the Lady Pioneers have also relied on other players. Sophomore forward Jill Bachonski and senior center Jill Struble are both averaging over 10 points a game. Sophomore forward Vanessa Lenoir has also been a defensive standout.

This week, the Lady Pioneers went 1-1. On Wednesday, Jill Bachonski scored 15 points and Jill Struble added 12 as WPC defeated Rutgers-Newark, 62-48 in Golden Dome in Newark. The victory extended the team's win streak at six games.

However, that streak was to come to an end as the first place Kean Lady Cougars defeated the Lady Pioneers, 60-55.

In that game, Kean opened the second half with a 16-2 run. WPC closed the gap to 53-47 with 3:29 remaining, but the Lady Cougars scored five of the next seven points to retain control. Bachonski led the team with 19 points. Michelle Jones netted 16 points.

The Lady Pioneers will have two more key NJAC games this week. On Tuesday, they'll take on Jersey City at the Rec Center at 6 p.m. On Saturday, WPC will travel to Montclair for a 2 p.m.

Pioneer swimmers fall to Montclair; Lady Pioneers win big, 181-94

By Robert Considine
SPORTS EDITOR

They say that winning ugly is better than not winning at all.

Pioneer swimming Head Coach Ed Gurka took exception to that rule Thursday night as the WPC men's swim team lost a 121-120 heartbreaker to the Red Hawks of Montclair at Wightman Pool.

After sighting a technicality with the Montclair swim team, which abolished any hopes of a Red Hawk victory, Gurka had a quick change of heart. This resulted in an opportunity for Montclair to come back and win the meet.

Shortly before the final and deciding swim of the meet, Gurka revealed to the referees that a Montclair swimmer had violated an NCAA rule earlier in the meet by swimming in the wrong lane. The referees acknowledged this and disqualified the swimmer's second place finish in the 500-yard freestyle.

This decision resulted in a subtraction of five points from the Red Hawks' total and an additional five points to the Pioneer total, making the score 119-105.

The final swim of the meet was the 400-yard freestyle relay. WPC had two relay squads for the race. Montclair had one. With 11 points going to the first place relay team, four points going to the second place team, and two points going to the third place team, the Red Hawks were now mathematically eliminated from a victory because of the technicality.

With a Pioneer win seemingly in hand, Gurka abruptly decided that this wasn't the best way to end what had been a very competitive and emotional meet. He "declined the penalty" and returned the points.

With the Pioneers now leading 114-110, Montclair knew that they had to win the event to win the meet.

Montclair took advantage of the break by winning the 400-yard freestyle relay by four seconds. They had earned the victory, as well as some respect for Gurka and the Pioneer swim team.

"I had to totally respect (Gurka's) decision," remarked Red Hawks Head Coach Brian McLaughlin. "Had we lost, I wouldn't have been upset because we would have lost in the water - not on a technicality."

"Things like this happen in the spirit of competition. It was a classy move by Ed and it was recognized by our entire team. Had it transpired the other way, we probably would have left here with some ill-feelings," McLaughlin added.

Gurka stood by his decision after the meet.

"I didn't want to win it that way. I don't regret it," said Gurka.

Despite the loss, some fine performances were turned in by the Pioneers. Jason Bogle was a winner in the 200-yard freestyle (1:50.54) and the 500-yard freestyle (5:02.43). Mike Rosenthal was also a double winner, placing first in the 1000-yard freestyle (10:19.94) and the 200-yard backstroke (2:12.57).

The Pioneers are now 5-3 overall and 1-2 in the New Jersey Athletic Conference this season.

The Lady Pioneers had a far more easier time with Montclair, winning by a score of 181-94.

Junior captain Connie Wassberg and sophomore Lisa Bedford were both triple-winners for WPC.

Wassberg was a winner in the 200-yard freestyle (1:59.57), the 500-yard freestyle (5:28), and the 200-yard butterfly (2:29.83).

Bedford placed first in the 100-yard freestyle (:57.74), the 200-yard individual medley (2:21.76), and the 200-yard breaststroke (2:38.73).

Freshman Alicia Hugues continued to impress as she won two events. Hugues was victorious in the 1000-yard freestyle (12:06.02) and the 200-yard backstroke (2:27.52).

The Lady Pioneers diving duo of Jen Conte and Sheri Glenn also contributed with a first and second place finish in the one-meter required diving event.

The win increased the Lady Pioneers' record to 8-2 overall and 3-1 in the NJAC.

Following this weekend's dual meet in Trenton, both the men's and women's swim teams will take on New York University (away) on Saturday at 1 p.m.

WPC Bowlers roll on

enjoy in the country. Not too shabby, considering that their top bowler, Wendy Kuipers, has been out with mononucleosis for the last two months.

"Without her on the team, it is like the Mets without Dwight Gooden," LoPresti commented. "Her absence is making us more capable. That showed when we finished third in our first tournament without her in Atlantic City."

Last weekend, both teams won convincingly at the Sunshine State Invitational in Orlando, Florida.

The WPC bowling program was recently honored by the BWA, in conjunction with the Pro Bowlers Association, with an award of merit for consistent winning collegiate bowling programs. That award will be given out on March 5 in New Brunswick.

For now, both teams will finish out the tournament season, preparing for the Collegiate Bowling National Championships in April.

Pioneers remain in NJAC title hunt

By Robert Considine
SPORTS EDITOR

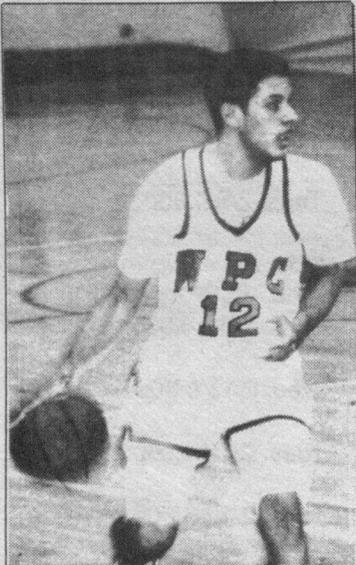

After starting off the season with a six-game winning streak, the WPC men's basketball team has found that domination of the New Jersey Athletic Conference doesn't always come that easily.

When winter break began, the Pioneers were 7-1 overall and 5-1 in the NJAC. The Pioneers now find themselves with a still respectable 12-6 mark. However, they are now 6-5 in the NJAC.

The Pioneers are still very much in the NJAC title hunt. There is currently a seven-team race with Glassboro, Stockton, Jersey City, Kean, Ramapo, and WPC all fighting for the top four playoff spots.

Only time will tell if the Pioneers will be one of those four teams. Five of their remaining six games will be against NJAC teams. The NJAC playoffs are scheduled to begin on February 21.

This week the Pioneers went 1-1. They defeated Rutgers-Newark 83-75 on Wednesday as Andrew Daniels led the way with 23 points and 11 rebounds.

Charlie Pino

The Pioneers fell to Kean on Friday night at the Rec Center, 83-54. The Cougars led 42-32 at the half and never looked back.

Junior forward Tommie Patterson, who is averaging over 20 points a game, is just six points shy of reaching the coveted 1,000 career-point plateau. Look for Patterson to reach that mark Tuesday night at the Rec Center as the Pioneers take on Jersey City. Tip-off is set for 7:30 p.m.

By Robert Considine
SPORTS EDITOR

While everyone else used January to take a break, WPC's Michelle Jones used January to break some records.

The Lady Pioneers' senior guard gained national attention with her 55 point performance against Jersey City on January 9.

Those 55 points set a new Division III and WPC record for points scored in a game. It really is quite an accomplishment when you consider that WPC opponents are averaging that many points a game.

In addition, the 5'6" Barnegat native also set two new NCAA All-Division records with most three-point baskets scored (15) and most three-pointers attempted (33).

The 55-point performance was the pinnacle of a simply awesome week. In three games, Jones scored 103 points. She shot for 35 of 76 from the floor, including 23 of 47 from three-point range. For good measure, she was 10 for 13 from the free throw line, compiled 20 assists, and had 12 steals.

In recognition of her accomplishments, Jones was named "Player of the Week" in the East Coast Athletic Conference and the New Jersey Athletic Conference. She was also named Sports Illustrated's

Michelle Jones

Small College "Player of the Week" and honored as the Star Ledger's "Athlete of the Week."

The accolades are justified. The great numbers have been there all year for the All-American candidate. She is currently ranked fourth in the nation in scoring and first in the nation in three-point baskets made per game with 3.2.

Jones is averaging over 24 points a game. She has scored 30 or more points five times this season. She has led the team in scoring in 10 of 17 games. Jones is also second on the team in assists and steals.

Jones is now the Lady Pioneer's All-Time leading scorer with over 1,700 points. With numbers like that, it's not hard to see that Michelle Jones will go down as one of the greats in WPC sports history.

Lady Pioneers raise record to 14-4; eye NJAC finals

By Robert Considine
SPORTS EDITOR

The WPC women's basketball team remained one of the most consistent teams in the New Jersey Athletic Conference this winter break, compiling a 7-2 record.

The Lady Pioneers are now 14-4 overall this year and 9-3 in the NJAC. A second consecutive trip to the NJAC championship is virtually assured.

Their success this season has been led by senior guard Michelle Jones. Jones is averaging over 24 points a game, including a record setting 55-point performance against Jersey City on January 9.

WPC bowlers rolling along

By Robert Considine
SPORTS EDITOR

Just when it seems you can't say anymore great things about the WPC bowling program, they still find a way to improve from the year before.

This year is no exception. The men's bowling team, in particular, has never been so dominant.

According to the Bowling Writers Association of America, they are currently the number one team in the country. This is nothing new for them. This year, however, they have really outdone themselves.

The Pioneers have now won their last five tournaments. That's a team record. Six consecutive tournament wins is the national record. This immediate success virtually assures the team a hold on their number ranking as the new poll results will be released on Friday.

Just how well is the men's team bowling? To put things in proper perspective, you must look at the team's future first-team All-Americans- Dave Carter, Chris Sole, and Chris Viale.

All three have won the collegiate bowling MVP awards in each of the last three years. Two years ago, Sole set an all-time collegiate bowling record with an overall average of 219.

This year Sole's record in serious jeopardy of being broken by himself, Carter, and Viale. Carter now has a 223 average. Sole is now averaging 220 a game. Viale is coming on strong with a 214 average.

For delighted Head Coach Mike LoPresti, this team represents the perfect team.

"What makes them so good is that the team around them is so good," said LoPresti.

"I'm tough on them in preparation. But I'm a cream puff on them during the competition. I call the shots and they knock down all the pins. And, you know, you can't argue with success. It's really been a dream season," LoPresti added.

The Lady Pioneer bowling team, is currently ranked sev-
